SAYS THOMPSON ASKED $15,000 LOAN OF TRACTION MEN

SAW STANCHFIELD OFTEN

Wanted to Head "Superficial" Investigation—His Interview with "Red Mike" Hylan.

Both He and Thomas Deny Senator's Statements About Them—Whitman Testifies Today.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 14.—The Senate Committee on the Judiciary resumed its investigation of Senator George F. Thompson's bribery charges this afternoon. Richard Henry Burke again appeared as a witness and made some interesting revelations. Others heard were Nicholas F. Brady, traction financier, and Charles G. M. Thomas, an officer of the Consolidated Gas Company, both of whom denied assertions made by Senator Thompson connecting them with the alleged attempt at bribery.

At the hearing on Friday Mr. Burke denied Senator Thompson's charge that he had sought to buy the Senator's support for the Carson-Martin 6-Cent Fare bill with promises of a $500,000 campaign fund from the traction companies to help make Thompson Governor. To-day he said Senator Thompson, at the time he was conducting the investigation into the Public Service Commissions and traction companies in New York City, asked him to negotiate a loan of $15,000 on his behalf, to be used for the launching of a furniture company in Lockport, near the Senator's home.

It was also alleged by Burke that Senator Thompson, while the investigation of the Public Service Commissions and the New York traction companies was in progress and since the Carson-Martin bill has been pending in his Senate Committee on Public Service, haunted the offices of traction magnates and traction lawyers, convoyed by Mr. Burke, whom he has characterized as a "lobby runner." On these visits Thompson, according to the testimony, tried to convince the traction men that he was a "good fellow."

Mr. Burke occupied most of the two hours of the hearing. His testimony was at times piquant. He told of an interview on traction matters which Senator Thompson had with "Red Mike," which was the Senator's way of identifying Mayor Hylan of New York.

Thomas Takes the Stand.

Charles G. M. Thomas of Flushing, Vice President and Treasurer of the Consolidated Gas Company, who, Senator Thompson testified, offered him $100,000 to start a trust company at Lockport, was called as the first witness. The witness, a short, stocky man with gray hair and mustache, signed a waiver of immunity handed to him by Jerome L. Cheney, counsel for the committee.

Before his examination could be begun Senator Salvatore A. Cotillo, a New York Democrat, called attention to the demand by Senator Thompson for an investigation of lobbying at the Capitol for the last two years.

"I want to know," said Senator Cotillo, "if we are going into an investigation of lobbying at the Capitol or simply the episode touching the seven-cent fare bill."

"We are going ahead as far as we have any information at hand," said Chairman Burlingame. Senator Cotillo then called attention to a statement made by Senator Thompson before a public forum in the Bronx yesterday in which he expressed suspicion of the purposes of the committee.

"Let us go into this right," said Senator Cotillo. "We cannot close this investigation in a week. I call your attention to Senator Thompson's statements that there is a plot to whitewash those implicated in Albany lobbying. If he has a basis for these contentions, let us find out. If you close this investigation prematurely the only thing for me to do is to resign as a member of this committee."

"There has been no indication of a closing," said Chairman Burlingame.

At this point Mr. Cheney began his examination of Mr. Thomas, who said he called on Mr. Thompson at the Biltmore Hotel in New York City with H. J. Hemmens of counsel for the Consolidated Gas Company, to whom he acted as technical adviser, to look over page proofs of the report of the Public Service Investigating Committee of which Thompson was Chairman. The witness fixed the time as January, 1917.

Lenine Sent Alliance Offer to the Cabinet in Berlin

BERLIN, April 14.—According to the Tageszeitung, the Berlin Cabinet, soon after the Hungarian revolution, had a profonged deliberation over a note from Nikolai Lenine, the Russian Premier, and his Foreign Minister, Tchitcherin, which was sent through Adolph Joffe, the German Ambassador to Russia, offering an alliance and an army of 500,000 men to be used against the Entente.

The newspaper adds that it does not know what reply to the Russians was sent.

Think Entente Is Dissolving.

PARIS, April 14.—An intercepted wireless dispatch picked up by the French wireless, sent by Tchitcherin to Bela Kun, the Hungarian leader, predicts the speedy dissolution of the Entente.

The dispatch says that French and British wireless dispatches picked up announce that allied troops will soon enter Hungary, but the American wireless is showing a more moderate policy toward the Bolsheviki.

CHAFE AT DELAY IN OCEAN FLIGHT

RIVALS MEET AT DINNER

Martinsyde Venture Aimed to Show Commercial Possibilities of Aviation.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., April 14.—The airdrome at Mount Pearl was a sea of mud and lightly frozen ponds today and Harry G. Hawker and Lieut. Commander Grieve were forced to abandon hope of getting their Sopwith biplane into the air to start a transatlantic flight for the Daily Mail $50,000 prize.

They took advantage of the delay to try out their engine once more and make little adjustments here and there in other equipments.

Adverse winds were blowing near the surface here and heavy fogs were off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, but Captain Clements, the meteorological expert sent here by the British Air Ministry, believed that strong, favorable westerly winds would be found at 10,000 feet altitude and Hawker determined to go today if he could get off the ground. Reports from England showed southerly gales and heavy rains there, but Clements believed that they would have passed by the time the fliers could reach England. Mid-Atlantic weather is good according to reports from numerous ships.

The field here was so heavy, however, and Hawker's heavy biplane was so dependent upon a favorable wind to help lift it out of the mud that he was forced to restrain his impatience to be off. Lieutenant Commander Grieve, the navigator, spent all the morning in consultation with Clements, and for a time it looked as if a start might be attempted.

Raynham to Avoid Experiments.

"A straight-out airplane flight without stunts in flying" is the way Frederick Philip Raynham, the youthful pilot, describes the transatlantic crossing which he and Captain Charles William Fairfax Molsee, navigator, will attempt at the first favorable opportunity after their biplane has been assembled. Raynham, Major Morgan, and expert mechanics brought with them from the Martinsyde plant, at work not far from the Brooklands Airdrome, put in another busy day at Quidividi, inside their canvas hangar, getting their biplane in order.

Raynham said he was ready for a trial flight. He refused absolutely to predict the starting time but admitted that he would take the air as soon as the Sopwith machine if that were humanly possible. Raynham and Morgan believe that they will have the better of the race if granted an even start, and some disinterested authorities agree with them.

Their biplane weighs, fully loaded, about 5,000 pounds and carries 360 gallons of gas, while the Sopwith weighs about 6,100 pounds and carries only 300 gallons. Raynham says he has a cruising radius of 2,000 miles with a twenty-mile head wind against him all the way across, figuring conservatively. Of course he expects to fly when the wind will be with him most of the way so that he is confident that the machine will be equal to the task. The machine was designed by G. H. Handasyde, who has had many years designing experience in co-operation with H. P. Martin, Chairman of Martinsydes.

The reappearance in the transatlantic attempt of Martinsydes as a competitor for The Daily Mail prize recalls that the firm as early as 1914 entered for a transatlantic competition, having com-

BIG NAVY FLEET RACING TO PORT SURPRISES CITY

'SEA HORNETS' SWARM HERE

Destroyers Dot Hudson Anchorage —Mayo Tells of Fleet's Work at Practice.

The Atlantic Fleet, with the new superdreadnought Mississippi leading the way, steamed in stately column into the Hudson yesterday, its unexpected arrival being just twenty hours ahead of the schedule announced two weeks ago by the Navy Department. The dreadnought column was expected to anchor in the Hudson shortly before noon today, yet at 10 o'clock yesterday the Mississippi, followed by eleven other great ships of the main fighting fleet, was rounding the Hook.

It was shortly before noon when the guns of the ancient monitor Amphitrite, on duty as a guard ship off Quarantine, let go with a salute of seventeen guns in honor of Admiral Henry T. Mayo, the Commander in Chief of the fleet, as his flagship, the giant Pennsylvania, swung past at fourteen knots on the way to her berth off Ninety-sixth Street.

By 1:30 P. M. the fleet was riding at anchor in the Hudson. Thus the great marine spectacle—the greatest ever seen in American waters—was staged a full day ahead of time, and the sightseers on foot and in motor-driven vehicles who crowded Riverside Drive yesterday afternoon saw at a glance more than 400,000 tons of "all big gun" fighters in addition to more than three score destroyers, with ten new submarines and a division of auxiliaries thrown in for good measure.

The dreadnoughts now in New York are fourteen in number, two of them, the electrically driven New Mexico and the naval "baby," the Idaho, being at the Navy Yard. All the others are in the great column that begins at a point off Fifty-fourth Street and ends far to the north of Fort Washington Point. The Delaware is the southernmost ship with the Mississippi, commanded by Captain William A. Moffett, who commanded the Chester when that vessel fired the first naval gun at Vera Cruz, riding in the northernmost berth, opposite West 145th Street.

New Yorkers were quietly going about their business yesterday morning expecting to take part in the welcome that was planned for today when the news was flashed from Sandy Hook that the fleet was steaming into the harbor nearly a full day ahead of schedule. The reason for the arrival ahead of time was subsequently ascertained from Admiral Mayo, who used every mile of the voyage from Guantanamo to the Hook for manoeuvres and battle tests. South of Hatteras, the fleet had manoeuvred in battle formation and at moderate speeds, but early yesterday the sea was so smooth and the wind so gentle that Admiral Mayo decided the time was opportune to test the speed capabilities of his great armada.

Fleet Raced Up the Coast.

The speed tests began with all the dreadnoughts clipping off the knots at the rate of seventeen an hour. This was at 9 A. M., Sunday. Two hours later the entire column was churning its way northward at twenty knots and by noon all the ships in the fleet were exceeding the records made when they were tested over the Rockland measured course prior to their acceptance by the Government. All the afternoon the great ironclads kept up the race, every ship in its appointed place in line, and every engine room force working, as never before, in an effort to win the blue ribbon of the homeward-bound race. It was unofficially reported that the Mississippi made the best showing, but this report was not verified officially. As Admiral Mayo put it, "every ship did so well that there was no such thing as best."

Three flagships entered the harbor in the centre of the dreadnought column, the Pennsylvania being between the New York and the Wyoming. The four-starred blue pennant of the Commander in Chief fluttered from the main truck of the Pennsylvania, while the two-starred red pennant of Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman, stretched to the breeze from the New York, and that of Rear Admiral Robert E. Coontz, also a red pennant, from the Wyoming. The Utah,

Won't Let Sarre Valley Go, Is Germany's Reported Stand

BERLIN, April 14, (Associated Press.)—The German Government is firmly resolved to refuse to discuss at the Peace Congress the future allegiance of the Sarre territory, according to a Berlin news agency on what it terms competent authority.

The Government will "resolutely reject any proposal to tear the Sarre territory from the empire by means of a general plebiscite."

LOOSE CARDS TO BE LOST

Citizens' Union Hears of Civilians Displaced by Favored Policemen at Higher Cost.

Police Commissioner Enright has done away with the accurate record-keeping methods installed by Police Commissioner Woods and substituted a system of loose cards which can be manipulated to make the crime record meagre when crime is abundant, according to a statement made by Leonard M. Wallstein, counsel to the City Government Committee of the Citizens' Union at the meeting of the union last night at 130 West Forty-second Street.

Mr. Wallstein also charged that Police Commissioner Enright had placed favored policemen in sheltered and easy places and asserted that many of the claims of reforms and improvements described in the Commissioner's report were based on misrepresentation. Mr. Wallstein's report follows:

"Changes in the manner of reporting the result of police work tend to shatter confidence in the present police administration. A study of the Commissioner's way of running the Police Department, a course publicly approved by the Mayor, evidences decided backsliding in its management and compels one to regard with suspicion the statistics and assertions that are given out for public consumption.

"On April 11 last Mayor Hylan wrote a letter to Commissioner Enright, charging the newspapers with publishing inaccurate statements about burglaries and other crimes committed in the city. The Mayor's letter was in acknowledgment of one written to him by the Commissioner, asserting that in January, February, and March, 1919, there had been fewer burglaries than during the corresponding period in previous years. The likelihood is that the Commissioner's statistics were incorrect and inaccurate, according to information I have received from reliable sources.

"For instance, I am informed the so-called 'squeal book' at the station houses has been abolished, and instead individual cards easily destroyed, if the record wouldn't show up well, are made out for each complaint. In addition there is a so-called 'canned book' in which the confidential records are kept under lock and key, entry of cases being made at the station house, I am told, and unless the police work on a case is successful, there is small likelihood of the facts being forwarded to Police Headquarters, and unless there is a report to headquarters, I am informed, no individual card is filed regarding the case.

"As a further evidence of the untrustworthiness of data furnished by the Commissioner for public consumption, Mr. Enright had hardly warmed his Commissioner's chair when there were rumors, later confirmed by him in his report, that the Bureau of Statistics, established in the Woods administration to compile accurate statistics for informing the public of the work of the department, had been abolished. The Mayor, in his letter of April 11th, refers to statistics thus accurately compiled, contrasting them with later statistics as furnished by Commissioner Enright.

The contrast is indeed significant, for it shows a greater number of crimes under a system of careful compilation, compared with an allegation of a smaller number of crimes reported under a dwarfed makeshift for keeping account of the voluminous statistics. The Commissioner states in his own report the work of the Bureau of Statistics, in which there had been twenty-five men, was transferred to the Bureau of Records, where eight men were assigned to these duties. This shrinkage certainly facilitates making a showing of a decrease in the number of crimes when all outward evidence is to the contrary.

"The Commissioner states the change was in the interests of economy, but the natural result is in the interests of darkness. If the statistics under the two systems are quite different, I have no doubt it is because of existing con-

INDEMNITY ON A GOLD BASIS

40 BILLION IN THE NEXT 30

PAYMENT TO FULL CAPACITY

American Framer of Terms Says Commission Will Exact Uttermost Obligation.

PARIS, April 14, (Associated Press.)—One hundred billion gold marks, ($23,800,000,000,) is the amount Germany must pay the allied and associated Governments for losses and damage caused in the war, plus other billions to be determined by a special commission on which Germany is to be represented.

This is the final and definite conclusion which has been reduced to writing after weeks of negotiation which took a wide range and involved frequent changes and modifications. The payment of the 100,000,000,000 gold marks is to be divided into three distinct amounts as follows:

First—Twenty billions within two years.

Second—Forty billions during thirty years beginning in 1921.

Third—Forty billions when a commission shall determine how it shall be done.

In view of the fluctuations through which the negotiations have passed, an authoritative statement was obtained today concerning the final terms of the settlements. This sums up the conditions as follows:

Germany is at the outset held generally responsible for losses and damages in accordance with President Wilson's fourteen points and the allied response at the time the armistice was concluded. To determine the extent of the payment under this responsibility a commission is set up to take testimony, assemble data, and arrange all details of the payment from the enemy and distribution among the allied and associated powers.

While the commission will administer the details of the payments, sufficient is known to permit the determination that an initial payment will be required of 20,000,000,000 gold marks, payable in two years without interest. It has also been determined that 40,000,000,000 gold marks shall be payable in bonds extending over a period of thirty years, beginning in 1921, with a sinking fund beginning in 1926.

These 40,000,000,000 marks draw 2½ per cent. interest from 1921 to 1926, and 5 per cent. interest after 1926.

In addition to the foregoing payments, Germany will also be required to deliver additional bonds for 40,000,000,000 marks, when the commission determines that this shall be done. These three payments of twenty, forty, and forty billions bring the total to 100,000,000,000 gold marks.

Beyond this total, the commission is empowered to fix anything more that may be required to cover Germany's indebtedness.

"In other words," concluded the eminent American authority who framed the terms and furnished the foregoing summary, "a commission is set up with power to collect from Germany to the utmost of her capacity to pay, within the limitation of her indebtedness."

All Payments on a Gold Basis.

It is in the gold mark that all payments are expressed in the final terms. This excludes depreciated paper marks and fixes the standard of payment in gold. The gold mark is worth about the same as the English shilling, and before the war was quoted at 23.82 American cents.

The allotment of the 100,000,000,000 marks among the allied and associated powers has not yet been finally decided, but a tentative arrangement makes the allotment of France about 55 per cent. of the total, Great Britain's allotment between 20 and 30 per cent., and the allotment of the United States between 2 and 5 per cent.

The text of the opening clause of the terms whereby Germany is held generally responsible reads substantially as follows:

"The allied and associated powers

Wilson Issues Statement On Behalf of Council, Predicting Early Solution of Peace Problems

PARIS, April 14.—(Associated Press)—The following statement by President Wilson, on behalf of the Council of Four, was issued tonight:

In view of the fact that the questions which must be settled in the peace with Germany have been brought so near a complete solution that they can now quickly be put through the final process of drafting, those who have been most constantly in conference about them have decided to advise that the German plenipotentiaries be invited to meet the representatives of the associated belligerent nations at Versailles on the 25th of April.

This does not mean that the many other questions connected with the general peace settlement will be interrupted, or that their consideration, which has long been under way, will be retarded. On the contrary, it is expected that rapid progress will now be made with these questions, so that they may also presently be expected to be ready for final settlement.

It is hoped that the questions most directly affecting Italy, especially the Adriatic question, can now be brought to a speedy agreement. The Adriatic question will be given for the time precedence over other questions and pressed by continual study to its final stage.

The settlements that belong especially to the treaty with Germany will, in this way, be got out of the way at the same time that all other settlements are being brought to a complete formulation. It is realized that, though this process must be followed, all the questions of the present great settlement are parts of a single whole.

SHARP FIGHTING IN GERMAN CITIES

BATTLE WITH MUNICH REDS

Troops Defeat Duesseldorf Spartacides—Preparing for Battle in Dresden.

BERLIN, April 14, (Associated Press.)—Many persons were killed or wounded in the centre of Berlin at noon today during a collision between troops and street venders. The troops fired a fusillade against the vendors.

This district was strongly cordoned by the Alexander Regiment with a view to suppressing traffic in stolen goods, and the vendors forcibly opposed their own removal. It is still strictly cordoned and tram cars are deflected from it.

The latest news received here from Bavaria is to the effect that the Communists in Munich have not yet been mastered, and that heavy fighting is raging in the streets there between Red Guards and troops loyal to the Government. The Central Railway Station, the Postoffice, the telegraph office and several other buildings are again in the hands of the Communists, who used heavy mine throwers in their recapture.

A number of persons have been killed or wounded in Munich.

Earlier advices reported that the whole of Bavaria, with the exception of Hof, had been regained by the Hoffman Government, which provisionally remains at Bamberg.

On Sunday, according to dispatches to the Lokal-Anzeiger, armed soldiers drove through the streets of Munich cheering for the Soviet. They were dragged out of their cars and roughly handled.

Dr. Levien, leader of the Independent Socialists, is said to have fled to Switzerland with 2,000,000 marks of State money.

Battle Expected in Dresden.

A Dresden dispatch to the Vossische Zeitung says that an assault by Soviet forces on the citadel in the Neustadt section of the city, on the right bank of the Elbe, is expected. Frontier troops and soldiers from Pirna, eleven miles southeast of Dresden, have established themselves near the Catholic Church to defend the northern end of the Friedrich Augustus Bridge. Some of the Jaeger and Grenadier troops are reported to be unreliable, their arms having been distributed among the insurgents.

Government troops sent against the Brunswick Soviet are reported today from Magdeburg to have come in contact with the outposts of the Brunswick Communist forces. The outposts fled before the advance of the Government contingent.

New disorders are reported from Gleiwitz, Silesia, where the coal miners

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 14.—"You may say all is going well," was the brief message which Lloyd George gave to the newspaper representatives who met him tonight on his arrival at Victoria Station from Paris.

The Channel crossing was very rough, but seemed to have no effect on the Premier, who looked the picture of health and contentment. He sprang from the carriage to the platform like a boy home for the holidays, and greeted his two private secretaries with boisterous heartiness.

PARIS, April 14.—Premier Lloyd George's stay in England will be a brief one, according to the Petit Journal. He will be back in Paris on Friday to take part in the Peace Conference proceedings, the newspaper says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 14.—The Parliamentary correspondent of The London Times in an article discussing the English political situation, one of the subheadings of which is "Seeds of Dissolution," says:

"It is bad enough to feel that Coalition carries in its body the seeds of its eventual disintegration. It is much worse to be brought to realize that the House of Commons, which it controls, is not a faithful mirror of the nation." He complains that "it is one of the gravest defects of the present House of Commons that it has the inspiration of youth in such infinitesimal degree. Altogether, it is difficult to regard the House in any other light than that of a house of caretakers. The present members are keeping green benches warm for a more truly representative body, which must sooner or later come into its inheritance."

He adds that "there are some who think of Lloyd George as a new Frankenstein, destined to be destroyed by the monster of his own creation," and concludes: "The party in power never improves upon its by-election record. The invariable experience is that bad results become progressively worse."

The Daily Mail in an editorial says:

"The Premier who took a wrong turning is coming to London today or tomorrow, we are told, and is expected to deliver an address to the House of Commons by way of putting himself right with Parliament and the people."

The Daily Mail does not doubt that he will use "all his incomparable eloquence and all his unmatched powers of persuasion" to convince his hearers that the peace terms and his performances are perfectly in accord with his election pledges.

"Yet," says The Mail, "we are convinced he will find it easier to satisfy the politicians in Parliament than to allay the distrust of plain men and women in the country."

PARIS, April 14.—The Midi today expressed the belief that the Allies had already indicated to the Germans the final peace terms of the Entente and had received from Philipp Scheidemann, the German Chancellor, an assurance that the conditions would be accepted.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 14.—Peace seems measurably near at last. Today the Council of Four was able to fix April 25 as the date for meeting the German delegates at Versailles.

It is announced informally that the differences over the future safety of France have been harmonized in a way to satisfy the French. In French official quarters it is intimated that the United States agrees to guarantee France against further attacks by Germany through the use of its armed forces. Information as to the accuracy of this statement is refused by the American delegation, the members of which say that they prefer that Premier Clemenceau shall do all the talking in the matter. So far the French are unwilling to disclose the details.

The Paris newspapers intimate that a satisfactory answer has been given to the French demand that America and Great Britain guarantee the French frontier. La Liberté says the arrangement is that America and Great Britain agree to furnish naval protection to France. How it is possible for the President to give any guarantee of the use of American armed forces is not understood by Americans here. Time and again when the League of Nations was being discussed he explained to the French that it was impossible, under the American Constitution, to make a similar guarantee in advance of a particular crisis, and that Congress alone had power to do so.

When completed the peace treaty will be a ponderous document. It will contain, according to what is said to be a conservative estimate, 75,000 words. Some think it will be expanded to 150,000.

Planning a Rhine Safety Zone.

PARIS, April 14, (Associated Press.)—It was stated in authoritative quarters tonight that a satisfactory agreement had been reached on the question of the Rhine frontier, thus removing the last of the main obstacles in the way to the Peace Treaty with Germany.

The Council of Four has under consideration a French plan for defense along the Rhine which provides for a line thirty miles east of the Rhine which shall be considered a boundary over which German troops cannot cross without making themselves liable to attack by British, French, and American troops.

The French hope to get allied assistance in policing this military zone east of the Rhine, as otherwise they would be compelled to transfer their garrisons from many French towns, thus upsetting long-established military arrangements.

Premier Clemenceau called on Colonel House tonight and expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the settlement. This indicates that the French will secure guarantees which will protect them adequately against renewed German aggression.

The agreement is believed to include complete demilitarization of both banks of the Rhine, extending twenty-five miles east of the river and throughout the German sections along the west bank, in which there will be no fortifications, no troops, and no conscription.

It was also definitely determined today that the treaty will be delivered to the German envoys on their arrival at Versailles on April 25. Subsequent action looking to the formulation of peace will be dependent somewhat on their authority to sign or their desire to return to Weimar for a consultation with the German authorities.

It is expected that the delegates of the other enemy powers will follow the Germans within a few days after their arrival at Versailles on April 25.

The Peace Conference Secretariat is busily completing arrangements for the meeting of the Peace Congress at Versailles. The German plenipotentiaries and the heads of the mission will be lodged in the annext of one of the principal hotels, while the staff will occupy another hotel. Both buildings will be guarded by military forces to prevent contact between the Germans and persons not connected with the Peace Congress.

It is expected that the proceedings at Versailles will be of comparatively short duration. On the supposition that the Germans will have a week in which to study the terms and communicate them to the German Government, the middle of May has been suggested as the not improbable date of the final exchange of signatures.

A statement by President Wilson, issued tonight in behalf of the Council of Four, says that the questions of peace are so near complete solution that they will be quickly and finally drafted. The announcement was contained in an official bulletin, which added that the Council advised inviting the German plenipotentiaries to meet at Versailles on April 25.

The President hopes that the Italian question, especially that part of it relating to the Adriatic, will be brought to a speedy agreement. The Adriatic question will have precedence over other questions.

The settlements belonging especially to the treaty with Germany, the statement says, will thus be got out of the way, and at the same time other settlements will be completely formulated.

President Wilson, speaking yesterday with the correspondent of The Temps with reference to the work of the Peace Conference, said:

"I have today good hope. The most complicated questions now are solved. Under these conditions I hope that a satisfactory solution will be reached pretty soon."

The remainder of the conversation, says the correspondent, consists of expressions by President Wilson of his admiration for France, the French people, and Paris, which city, the President said, reminded him greatly of Washington, which was planned by a Frenchman, Major l'Enfant, who was Washington's companion. The President also declared that the Seine reminded him and other Americans of the Potomac.

The Council of Four did not meet this morning. Instead, President Wilson had a long conference with Premier Orlando and other Italian leaders on the Adriatic problem.

Premier Orlando recently suggested to the President the advisability of informal exchanges over the question of Fiume and Italy's claims in the Eastern Adriatic. President Wilson, in concurring with this suggestion, promised to give the matter his personal study. The conference today was probably the outcome of this suggestion.

Their discussion lasted four and a half hours today on the Adriatic question, but did not complete their work, which will be resumed Wednesday morning. Hope was expressed tonight that the question might be ready for the consideration of the Council of Four on Wednesday afternoon.

WASHINGTON April 14.—Continued progress at the Peace Conference was reported today in dispatches to the White House from Paris. The intimation was conveyed that all important questions still at issue would soon be cleared up.

White House advices have added nothing to information carried in press dispatches regarding the adoption of the amended covenant of the League of Nations.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 13.—An unexpected meeting of the Big Four called by President Wilson without any previous suggestion of such a session was held this evening at the President's house from 6 to 8 o'clock. Although there seemed to be an air of emergency about the whole affair, Premiers Orlando, Lloyd George, and Clemenceau all seemed in unusually good humor on their departure. Tardieu and Haskins, who are experts on the Sarre Valley question, were the only outsiders called in. It was announced after the meeting that President Wilson would make a formal public statement tomorrow, but the subject of it was not disclosed.

A defendable explanation of this afternoon's session was that because of Lloyd George's departure for England tomorrow and Orlando's departure for Rome on Friday, President Wilson was eager to get all the four together before the departures to impress upon them that the business of making peace could not be delayed because of the absence of any Premier, no matter how urgent the call might be for him in his own country.

Lloyd George has explained his departure for London tomorrow by saying that he is going frankly to tell Parliament everything that has been done, and then to ask for a vote of confidence. The French Parliament, both chambers taking a hint from England, is now insisting that Clemenceau tell them everything also.

OUR ROLE IN ARMENIA IS REPORTED SETTLED

Paris Hears of an Agreement Conferring a Mandate Upon This Government.

PARIS, April 14.—As a result of conferences between Premier Clemenceau and Prince Feisal, son of the King of the Hedjas, the allied program in the Levant is reported to have been decided upon. Under the reported agreement France would obtain Syria, with Damascus and Alexandretta, and the United States would get Armenia.

The use of the words "obtain" and "get" in the above dispatch apparently does not mean that France and the United States are to acquire the territories, but that they will become mandataries over them.

BORAH SEES FLAWS IN NEW COVENANT

Senator, Upon Return from Speaking Tour Against League, Reaffirms His Opposition.

CALLS IT POWERLESS

Poindexter Wires Criticism of Points —Chamberlain Finds Amended Version "Practicable."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—As firmly opposed to the League of Nations as ever, Senator Borah of Idaho, on his return to Washington today from a stumping tour against the League in the Middle West and Southwest, stated in an interview that the recent amendments to the League covenant had not eliminated all the fundamental objections raised by its opponents. Unless further changes were made, he said, the opposition would fight the League project in the Senate.

Along with Mr. Borah's reaffirmation of opposition to the League, there was made public a statement, telegraphed from Spokane by Senator Poindexter, in which he analyzed features in the new covenant which, he argued, would operate against the independence of the United States in its relations with other nations.

Mr. Borah's statement follows:

"It is difficult to discuss in detail the effect of the changes in the proposed constitution in view of the fact that we have not the language of the instrument, but only someone's construction. When we remember the construction which was placed upon the instrument before we are not sure that the construction is one which it is safe to follow.

"But it would seem, first, that the proposed League would commit us to alliances with European and Asiatic powers and oblige us to take part in the ordinary conflicts and turmoil of Europe.

"Second—That we still assume the tremendous obligation of guaranteeing the territorial integrity and political independence of all nations members of the League; and the argument is that all nations are ultimately to become members of the League, so that we will guarantee the territorial integrity of all nations.

"Third—That under the voting arrangements of the League, control of the entire machinery of the League remains in European and Asiatic Powers.

"Fourth—The provisions for disarmament are wholly ineffective. There is really no provision for disarmament whatever. The whole matter of disarmament rests as it is now with the judgment and discretion of each nation, that is, each nation determines for itself to what extent it will disarm. Of course this is no disarmament at all.

"Fifth—If the jurisdiction and power of the Executive Council remains the same as heretofore then the language preserving the Monroe Doctrine is inappropriate and wholly inadequate.

"Sixth—The League still fails to provide any machinery for the application of the principle of self-determination, without which there can never be peace. Until this principle is fully recognized and the machinery for its peaceful application provided for, and League of Nations would be simply a vast machine based upon military power to oppress and hold in subjection all small nations and to sterilize all progress.

"Seventh—It still fails to provide any check or control whatever upon the part of the people over the five or nine men within whose unlimited and undefined discretion rests the question of peace or war. It still remains not a league of peoples, not a league of free nations, but a league of diplomats, of officials, of imperialists. It still leaves it in the power of those five or nine men, assuming now that we are going to live up to the provisions of the League, to commit us to war.

"These are some of the things which seem still to inhere in the proposed League, and, this being so, I could not and would not support it. Indeed, I think the real issue is now formed and the real contest now begins."

In his telegraphed statement Mr. Poindexter said in part:

"Regarding the reported amendments to the League of Nations Constitution, as cabled from Paris yesterday, I would state: First, if the provision for a unanimous vote includes the votes of parties to an international dispute, requiring their agreement on any action, of course the League is meaningless and powerless, as the agreement makes action of the League unnecessary. If the parties to the dispute are not allowed to vote, then their vital affairs are under the control of an alien tribunal, in which they have no voice—a total surrender of sovereignty as to such matters."

Senator Chamberlain of Oregon expressed the opinion that the League covenant, as now amended, is a practicable instrument, from the American viewpoint.

CRITICISE LEAGUE REDRAFT.

Some London Newspapers Say It Is Inferior to Original.

LONDON, April 14.—The summary of the amended covenant of the League of Nations evokes no enthusiasm in the London morning newspapers, and it is declared by some commentators to be less satisfactory than the first draft. The Chronicle, for instance, fixes on certain points which it thinks make the new draft "distinctly, and perhaps decisively, inferior to the old." That newspaper condemns requiring unanimity for the decisions of both Council and Assembly, the terms upon which the covenant may be amended, and the permission given to any nation to withdraw on two years' notice. It regards the covenant as unharmed by the Monroe Doctrine amendment, which it believes should facilitate the adhesion of the United States to the covenant.

The Daily News, a warm champion of the principle of the League, sees danger in some of its provisions. It objects to the constitution of the new Council, which, it says, "will manifestly be controlled by prominent representatives of the five great powers when they are in agreement," and it fails to see how the four representatives of other powers chosen for the Assembly can have much independence. The paper does not express any great confidence in the efficacy of the League in any case.

The labor paper, The Daily Herald, says the summary does not indicate much improvement on the original draft. It declares that, from a democratic viewpoint, "the League is still an alliance of States and not a union of peoples."

The Post, an opponent of the League and a severe critic of President Wilson, refers ironically to the "new Garden of Eden" in which "the Monroe Doctrine will take the place of the tree of knowledge of good and evil," referring to the "fruits of the Western Hemisphere being forever forbidden to signatories of the League."

Attributing to President Wilson personally the features of the draft to which it most objects, The Post says "posterity will place him with Metternich and Castlereagh as one who worked for the confusion of other nations and the greatness of his own." It concludes by declaring it monstrous that such a covenant should be signed without being first fairly considered by the public and Parliament.

SAYS HULL ELECTION FORCED PREMIER'S HAND

Echo de Paris Credits Lloyd George with Demanding More Severe Indemnity Terms.

PARIS, April 14.—Alarmed by the result of the bye-election at Hull last week, Premier Lloyd George, according to the Echo de Paris, has persuaded the Council of Four to revamp completely the financial plan to be incorporated in the treaty of peace. Instead of payment of 25,000,000,000 francs on account and annual payments to be fixed by a commission, it has been decided to fix at once the amount which Germany will have to pay within fifty years. This amount is kept secret, but it is indicated by the newspaper that a figure of 250,000,000,000 francs has been agreed upon, which includes all war damages as well as the cost of pensions.

Fixing the total sum will have the merit of facilitating Treasury operations and the carrying out of mutual measures for assistance between the Allies. The first instalment of 25,000,000,000 francs must be paid within eighteen months, the newspaper declares.

Other newspapers, however, do not mention any such change in the terms, but all information in French quarters agrees in regard to the Sarre Valley. It is said that it is settled the mines will become the absolute property of France, which will police the region, which, however, will be administered by a sort of Directorate under the auspices of the League of Nations. This Directorate will consist of one inhabitant of the Sarre region, one Frenchman, and three nominees of the League. The régime, it is said, will last for fifteen years, when a plebiscite will be held, and in the event that the inhabitants elect to return to Germany that nation will be obliged to buy back the mines, paying in gold.

To carry out this task will be no mean undertaking, says the commentators, especially those of the Echo de Paris and the Journal, who declare it to be simply a repetition of the Tangier régime, which they say has been seen to be the equivalent of "most complete inertia."

Neither are the critics satisfied with the plan for military occupation of the left bank of the Rhine, although the methods to be followed have not been finally decided upon. It is stated in French quarters that this will be entirely in the hands of French troops, who will guard the bridge heads and railroad junction. In addition, there is to be a new thirty-mile neutral military zone on the right bank of the river, it is said. These two measures will be in force but fifteen years, troops being progressively withdrawn as installments of the debt is paid by Germany, as was done by that country with France in 1871.

"Pertinax," writing in the Echo de Paris, maintains that if France is left to "guard alone the common good of civilization she ought to be backed actively by a defensive alliance with England and America, which is clearly defined in detail."

GUCHKOFF SAYS RUSSIA MUST SAVE HERSELF

Ex-War Minister Wants Only Economic and Financial Aid from Allies.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, April 14.—Alexander Ivanovitch Guchkoff, former President of the Duma and Minister of War and Marine under Lvoff after the abdication of the Czar, is now heading a special Russian Red Cross Mission on its way to Paris and London to come to an agreement with the Allies about the return of Russian prisoners who were unable to enter their country through Poland or Galicia owing to the war with the Bolsheviki. M. Guchkoff hopes to be able to persuade the Allies to allow them to pass through Rumania via the Black Sea.

M. Guchkoff, saying that his mission was not of a political character, consented to give his personal views of the situation in Russia.

"According to my opinion," he said, "and as far as I know, armed allied intervention has very few partisans, even in Russia, where the last occurrences have caused deep disillusion. The belief prevails that the task of saving and freeing Russia must be reserved, not to strangers, but to the Russians themselves, aided, if possible, by other Slavs. Neither France, England, Italy nor America must sacrifice the generous blood of their sons for Russia. But on the other hand, all the civilized world wishes the political, economic, and moral regeneration of Russia. We Russians expect above all from the Allies economic aid, and if possible, financial aid.

"Nothwithstanding the territorial successes of the Bolsheviki, especially in Southern Russia, we who are their adversaries are sure their reign is drawing toward its end.

If the League of Nations does not handle the matter, the allied Governments will support Belgium's demand, and it is understood certain assurances have been obtained that Holland will deliver the Hohenzollerns.

DON'T HURRY ON NOTES, PAGE TOLD THE BRITISH

Viscount Finlay, Who Answered Our Pre-War Complaints, Reveals Fact at London Banquet.

LONDON, April 14.—John A. Stewart of New York at a luncheon today given in honor of himself and Major Louis L. Seaman of New York, Chairman of the British War Relief Association, announced that he had received a cablegram from the Sulgrave Association of the United States offering to present marble busts of George Washington to Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral, and Sulgrave Manor in Northamptonshire, where the Washington family originated.

The luncheon was given by Sir Charles Wakefield, former Lord Mayor, in honor of Mr. Stewart and Major Seaman, who are presenting the Barnard statue of Lincoln to the City of Manchester next week.

The Lord High Chancellor, Viscount Finlay, after saying that a wholly new era has opened between England and America, remarked that he was now at liberty to tell Ambassador Davis that it was he, as Attorney General, who had drafted all the British notes exchanged with the United States, and went on with a smile:

"Ambassador Page used to say to me, 'My dear friend, don't hurry with the notes; they are not pressing.'"

Referring to reports of differences at Paris, he advised his hearers to be extremely chary of accepting rumors of any differences between the United States and Great Britain, adding: "The differences of the past between the two countries will never occur again."

Major Seaman said: "Our friendship is stronger than any League of Nations—which God forbid should ever exist."

Major Seaman was applauded when he said he wanted to see a league between England, America, and France.

SAY GREAT CRISIS CONFRONTS ITALY

Food Distribution May Cease for Lack of Coal with Which to Operate Railroads.

AND FACTORIES SHUT DOWN

Police and Troops Prevent Threatened Outbreak at Turin—Bolshevist Propaganda Feared.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Italy is regarded in well informed quarters here as face to face with the most desperate crisis since the Austro-German hordes broke through the Isonzo line. The food and coal situations have developed grave popular unrest which if not dealt with wisely and promptly, Italian official circles here say, may lead to strikes and a revolt that may tax the ability of the authorities to deal with them.

Bolshevist propaganda is very active and the extremists, it is said, hope to profit in the event that the American and allied Governments fail to provide Italy with means for coping with the problem. Chief among the needs is coal. There is danger, the Italian officials say, that food may be piled up in the port terminals and not reach the population through lack of fuel necessary to operate the railroads. Moreover, unless coal in very great quantities is shipped immediately many large factories will be forced into idleness and hundreds of thousands of workmen thrown into unemployment, thereby aggravating the situation.

State Department official advices from Rome have given a fair estimate of the situation, and the Italian Embassy has received dispatches emphasizing the importance of prompt relief. The advices reaching the State Department were not made public in their entirety, but two bulletins were issued on the subject.

"The State Department," said the first announcement, "has received a dispatch from Rome reporting that there were rumors at Turin Saturday of impending strikes attributed to Bolshevist strike propaganda. Because of reports in circulation and posters found in houses there, extra policemen are reported to have been employed to patrol the city as an additional safeguard against an outbreak, and cavalrymen are said to be quartered in the city. The dispatch says every military and police precaution has been taken, and that the Italian authorities have the situation well in hand."

A second bulletin, issued later in the day, read:

"State Department advices say a general strike of twenty-four hours took place in the Province of Rome last Thursday as a protest against the refusal of permission for a street procession by radical Socialists on what was understood to be Lenine's birthday. There was practically no disorder, a few persons participating in the demonstration being arrested."

Henry Rood, head of the Italian Bureau of Information in New York, arrived in Washington this afternoon for a conference with the Italian Embassy officials.

"We have no official confirmation of reports that strikes and riots are occurring in Italy," said Mr. Rood at the conclusion of the conference, "but we are informed that Italian public opinion is very much aroused by the apparent indifference of the Entente Allies regarding the extremely serious crisis Italy is facing.

"The minimum coal requirements of Italy are estimated to be 800,000 tons a month. During March Italy received less than half this amount. The situation is due largely to the lack of available tonnage. During the war Italy lost 57 per cent. of her tonnage, a loss proportionately larger than was suffered by Great Britain. As for the food situation, it is growing steadily worse. Since April 1 the Italian Government has been obliged to re-establish war bread, which had been abandoned only two months before. Meat is very scarce, although meat rationing has been continued.

"Regarding the rumor that Italian port facilities already are choked with steamers arriving with food, the Italian High Commissioner, F. Omattrone, gives me the following statement today, based on official cables coming in response to his request for exact information on this point:

"'At Naples there are only two steamers discharging coal, while there are available berths for nine steamers. Genoa has only one steamer there, while about 4,000 stevedores and other workers are idle, and ready to discharge cargoes from other steamers if they should arrive.'

Milan Socialists Riotous.

MILAN, April 13.—There was considerable disorder, in which a number of persons were injured in the course of a meeting of Socialists here today. The meeting had proceeded in an orderly manner until an Anarchist orator addressed the gathering.

Part of the audience took exception to the speaker's remarks, and the police intervened to maintain order. The demonstrators thereupon stoned the policemen and compelled them to take refuge in a neighboring house, which was besieged by the mob. Carabineers and cavalry several times charged the crowd, and several persons on both sides were wounded before order was restored.

SHARP FIGHTING IN GERMAN CITIES

are striking against the inadequate food supply.

The strike of bank employes and metal workers in Berlin continues.

It is reported from Essen that the strike of the Krupp employes has ended.

Announces Army Rule in Munich.

NUREMBERG, April 13, (via Copenhagen.)—A report from Third Army Headquarters at Munich says that the garrison has established a military dictatorship in support of the Hoffmann Ministry, which the Soviet régime seeks to oust from office. Action to recover the capital from Soviet forces is progressing favorably, it is said.

Dr. Adolf Lipp, who was appointed Commissioner for Foreign Affairs in the Soviet Cabinet on April 9, has again been placed in an insane asylum, according to report. Sixteen Soviet leaders, including Landauer, Wagner, and Mühsam, members of the Soviet Ministry, are said to have been arrested.

PARIS, April 14.—A proclamation issued by the Bavarian Government announces that the garrison at Munich has swept away the Soviet forces, that the régime of Premier Hoffmann has been re-established, and that the transportation of the Polish General Haller's Army across Germany for Poland will start April 15.

Arrests Follow Neuring Murder.

COPENHAGEN, April 14.—Four persons have been arrested in Dresden on suspicion of having had a part in the murder of War Minister Neuring on Saturday.

The Communist demonstration held in Dresden on Sunday was a complete failure, advices from the Saxon capital say.

In the Zwickau and Lagau mining districts of Saxony 90 per cent. of the miners have voted against a continuation of the strike.

DUSSELDORF, April 13, (via Copenhagen.)—On Saturday night and Sunday morning government troops attacked Spartacide forces intrenched in the Oberbilk quarter, in the southeastern section of the city, and, after a violent bombardment with artillery and minethrowers, ejected them. The majority of the Spartacides fled in the direction of Eller and the troops are no longer encountering serious resistance.

TO KEEP LEDEBOUR IN JAIL.

Soviets Informed of Rebuff — Imprisoned Man Charges Cruelty.

BERLIN, April 12, (Associated Press).—The Soviet Congress was informed today that Georg Ledebour, who is confined in Moabit Jail and whose release was demanded on March 30 by the Communist Workmen's Council, will not be liberated.

Independent Socialist newspapers print an attack written by Ledebour while in jail upon Herr Heine, Prussian Minister of Justice, accusing him of mistreating Spartacide prisoners in the Moabit Jail. He says he is in daily fear of being murdered and that Karl Radek was in constant jeopardy while in prison.

Ledebour says that he has heard groans of arrested Spartacide adherents, who were being "done to death in some hidden recess of the prison." He asserts that he has also heard rifle shots, "indicating wholesale executions" there.

DERNBURG FINANCE MINISTER.

Former German Propaganda Chief Here Succeeds Schiffer.

BERLIN, April 14, (via Copenhagen.)—Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former Colonial Minister and former Chief of the German Propaganda Service in the United States, has been appointed Minister of Finance in the National Government to succeed Dr. Schiffer, who resigned last week, the Tageblatt announces.

GIVES SOVIET RULES FOR PROPAGANDA

Dr. Hillis Reveals Instructions Sent to Bolshevist Agents in Ukraine.

Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of the Plymouth Church of Brooklyn, in an address made yesterday in the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, told of a secret Bolshevist circular sent to Soviet agents in every country. He said:

"The confidential instructions sent out by the Bolsheviki are revelatory as to the peril of a world conflagration. There is now in the hands of the Ukranian staff of Berne, Switzerland, a document called 'General Instructions to the Bolshevist Agents in Every Country.' This paper was obtained through counter-espionage service, and forms part of the record of a meeting of the Ukrainian leaders on Dec. 20, 1918. The original was translated by Serge Persky, and the certified copy came to me through C. D. Wood of Berne, Switzerland. Dr. Persky says: 'At the beginning of November, 1918, at a private counsel held by Lenine, at which Trotsky, Joutkovsky, Radek, and Tchitcherin took part, general instructions were drawn up for agents of the Soviets abroad and were sent immediately by couriers.'

"The following is the document in question:

To representatives and agents of the Republic of Soviets abroad:

General Instructions.

A—International Relations.

1—Support Chauvinist movements and national conflicts.
2—Provoke agitation in order to bring about international conflicts.
3—Make attacks on representatives of foreign powers.
4—Thanks to such action, internal disorders and collision will be encouraged and agitation strengthened in the interest of the Social Democratic Party.

B—Internal Politics.

1—Compromise the reputation, by no matter what means, of influential men.
2—Attack those in power.
3—Provoke anti-Governmental agitations.
4—Stir up general and partial strikes.
5—Destroy machinery and boilers.
6—Spread propaganda literature.
7—Collisions will be facilitated so that we can seize power.

C. In the Economic Domain:

1. Provoke and support railway strikes.
2. Blow up bridges.
3. Do everything possible to disorganize transportation.
4. Hinder the shipment of wheat to the towns.
5. Stir up financial difficulties.
6. Inundate the market with false banknotes.

D. Results:

1. These actions will bring about economic troubles which will lead to inevitable catastrophes.
2. Then the coup d'etat will meet with the sympathy of the masses.

E. In the Military Domain:

1. Strong propaganda among the troops, stir up conflicts between officers and soldiers, and provoke attacks upon superior officers.
2. Blow up arsenals, bridges, railroads, and powder magazines.
3. Seize shipments of raw materials destined for factories.
4. In this way the complete confusion of the army will be brought about and the soldiers will adopt the workmen's program.

F. Search and spying in conformity with the requirements of war time.

1. Strategic search and spying in the army, in fortresses, in factories, exact estimate of armed forces and their morale.
2. Tactical search and spying, on the front and in the interior.
3. Search and evplonage in the navy, movements of squadrons, naval docks, and bases.

In conclusion Dr. Hillis presented a certified document from the all-Russian Extraordinary Commission at the Soviet of people's commissars directing their agents in Russia to confiscate all property belonging to the Young Men's Christian Association, and to expel their agents from the country or to shut them up in concentration camps. He reviewed the distribution of literature in the public schools, and referred to the Bolshevist addresses given in certain school buildings.

VOTE FOR SOVIET CHAMBER.

German Majority Socialists Carry Plan for Nation-Wide System.

BERLIN, April 14, (Associated Press.)—In spite of adverse votes by the Independent Socialists, the Soviet Congress today adopted the resolution sponsored by the Majority Socialists for the incorporatio nof every ounce of national economic energy in a nation-wide Soviet system which will culminate in a National Workers' Chamber, representative of all crafts, arts, professions, and industries.

The owners and workers in all branches of production are to be organized, artists, journalists, preachers, and physicians, as well as the manual workers of each profession, being expected to appoint local representatives for territorial councils. The National Council will then elect delegates to the Workers' Chamber, which will supplement the National Assembly and definitely establish a two-chamber system in the National Legislature.

The resolution provides for strict parity of representation of employers and employes.

OUR OVERSEAS HOSTS IN GREAT EXODUS

Crusaders of the New World Streaming Out of the Ruins and Wrecks of War.

ARMIES PASS INTO HISTORY

Occupation Force on Enemy's Soil Will Soon Be All That Remains on the Front.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NANCY, April 13.—He was a little, old, wrinkled man, stooped as if by burdens and unending care. Mooching about amid the ruins of a one-time village over east from here, he picked up a stone here and stone there and threw them with painful exactness into piles that grew slowly. No other living thing was in sight. The pathetic figure appeared to be the sole steward of that dismal wreck of war.

I could see him at his task as I came down a long hill past a striking white shaft, about which the grass was carefully kept and the sold well tended—unquestionably the old man's work. He stood erect with some effort as I drew near. I gave him a cigarette. Almost before he had finished lighting it he gave a quick glance at my uniform and car, and said:

"Why, I thought the Americans had all gone home. The war is over, isn't it, long, long ago?"

I didn't bother about telling the old Frenchman that peace, like Spring, was slow in coming. I gave him some more cigarettes and went my way.

How well that little old man in his wrecked village told the chapter, the last chapter, of some American soldiers in France. For that village was Barlemont-les-Bansemont, where the American troops first went into the line, and that white shaft was erected in memory of the first three American soldiers to fall in France. Back in October, 1917, that was. And here, with not a soldier of any kind in sight, without an American fighter within many, many miles, the old Frenchman thought we had all gone home. And as from that historic spot where the 16th Infantry first faced the German fighters America and her army had passed, so is America's army passing rapidly away from the scenes where the youthful warriors from the United States hit the blow that decided the war.

Read the newspapers of fifteen months ago. How often the dispatches told of the exploits of the Americans in the Luneville sector, in the Baccarat sector and in the Toul sector. Yet from along those ridges and from those valleys Uncle Sam's doughboys have now gone on, their job done. Little crosses stay behind and dot the hills, and in the memory of village shopkeepers the Americans linger as profitable visitors, but our army is fast clearing out.

Over in Toul, where the Second Army has its headquarters, Lieut. Gen. Bullard is getting ready to close up shop, for his command passes out of existence tomorrow. The fate of war deprived the Second Army of the glory that was coming to it, for when the war stopped on the 11th of November this army was just starting north in a battle that unquestionably would have taken it to Metz. It had just been formed, and with seasoned troops from the First Army had high hopes of achievement. But it did not work out that way.

Next week the First Army will cease to be. Lieut. Gen. Liggett, who commanded in the battle of the Meuse and Argonne, sent most of his troops to the Third Army on the Rhine, but nevertheless the passing of America's most famous unit certainly marks a page in our military history in this war.

After being on the Rhine, where hope of getting home quickly seems to fade as Spring approaches, with the promise of a Summer in Germany, it is more than interesting to be shown the American Expeditionary Force really going home. In ten days there will be only one American Army in Europe, the Army of Occupation, all the rest having gone home.

From Toul, from Commercy, from Bar-le-Duc, from Meuse, and Argonne towns that will always live in American history, they are pulling out, and they are glad to go, these doughboys of ours, to whom inactivity is the most unwelcome job of all. From the ruins and wrecks of the war they are going home to their own country, which not one of them loves the less because he has been away.

DENY UNFAIR CENSORSHIP.

Lloyd George Says Delays Are Due to Cable Breaks and Congestion.

In a letter made public yesterday by James H. Ardern of Ardern & Franklin, general agents at 1 Wall Street, Prime Minister David Lloyd George denied that the British censorship over cables had ever been used to the detriment of American business men. Mr. Lloyd George attributed the long delays on cable messages to breaks in the cable and to the general congestion, in part produced by the Peace Conference.

"While I think that the censorship should be maintained, so far as cutting off Bolshevist propaganda is concerned," said Mr. Ardern, "I do think that there is no reason now for continuing the ban on commercial messages written in plain English. There are no German stocks now to be transferred by cable, and the censorship should not be aimed at legitimate business transactions. When I was in England I found that the rule of the censor was to send messages in the order named—governmental, press, stock exchange, and last, commercial business. I think that this method is perfectly right, but I fail to see any reason for the long delays in delivery. While there have been no instances of late of non-delivery, the delays are still with us."

The censorship and consequent delays have been the subject of much correspondence between business men and the Merchants' Association in the last few months.

affirm, and Germany admits responsibility for, all losses and damages of the allied and associated Governments and their nationals from the unjustifiable warfare waged by the enemy power against the allied and associated Governments."

Then follows a provision for the commission on payments, and extended details of the operations of the commission.

Earlier in the day it was unofficially stated that the initial payment of 20,000,000,000 marks might be made in cash or its equivalent in commodities before May 1, 1921, and that the report of the commission on payments beyond the 100,000,000,000 marks must be made before that date.

PEKING, April 12.—The Korean independence movement continues unabated. Unfortunately the Koreans have not always maintained their prearranged attitude of passivity, and in recent demonstrations they have resorted to violence, but only after the soldiers had fired upon the crowds who had shouted "Mansei!" The Japanese are sending military reinforcements to Korea.

Despite the number of killings and assaults the Koreans persist in voicing their desires for independence. The movement is purely national and unassociated with the Bolsheviki, as certain Japanese reports suggest in order to discredit the agitation, in which Christians, Buddhists, and Heaven Worshippers unanimously participate.

TOKIO, April 8, (Associated Press.)—Officials of the Japanese War Department confirmed reports of the arrest at Pyeng Yang, Korea, of the Rev. Eli M. Mowry of Mansfield, Ohio, an American Presbyterian Missionary.

GENEVA, April 14, (Associated Press.)—The former Prince Joachim of the Hohenzollern family hopes to emigrate to America after peace is signed, according to report. Joachim, who is the youngest son of the former German Emperor, has arrived here from Berlin, and expresses his intention of remaining in Switzerland until after the peace settlement.

The Hohenzollerns have just bought a large estate near Lugano, where the former Emperor eventually hopes to live in exile.

BERLIN, April 13 (via Copenhagen.)—Thanks to the circumspect military preparations, the Congress of Soviet Councils here will probably be closed within a day or two and the danger of a new revolution will be spared to Berlin for the moment.

What the Spartacides failed to accomplish in Berlin is now being tried in Dresden and Brunswick with little more success, for troops are already en route to both places. It is expected that War Minister Neuring's murder at Dresden will be as quickly avenged as Old Clothes Mender Menger's performances will be punished in Brunswick, though the resistance in Brunswick may prove more obstinate than in Dresden.

The peasants' boycott is doing much more to bring Munich back to reason than the Government now established at Bamberg. By Tuesday or Wednesday the Bavarian capital may be freed from Red rule, not by any military effort, perhaps, but by the hard common sense of its citizens, which has already triumphed over the Spartacides in all the other Bavarian cities.

Charge Plot in Neuring Murder.

The murder of the Saxon War Minister shocked and sobered even the radical elements in Berlin, which profess to be idealistic and not criminal. The Democrats and Regular Socialists accused them in the plainest possible language in the Councils' Congress this morning of being responsible for the crime in Dresden, and indeed there is said to be plenty of evidence that it was planned and engineered by a well-known Spartacide leader, Fraenkel, in pursuance of a scheme to seize the Government offices and proclaim a Soviet republic.

Neuring was considered to be the only and what troops they could spare were already en route to Brunswick. Now or never, argued the Saxon Spartacides, and set the land afire.

The Dresden crime has aroused such a storm of indignation against the Communists and their abettors, the Independent Socialists, that the Saxon revolution is considered to be doomed before it has hardly begun. Troops from Berlin will arrive in Dresden promptly and may be expected to employ the severest methods. Then, for a couple of weeks, comparative tranquility may prevail in Germany, for even the riots in Duesseldorf and the Ruhr district are waning.

Grave Fears for May Day.

For May 1, however, the Communists and Independents plan a general strike all over Germany. It was considered very shortsighted in the bourgeois parties in the Prussian Diet to vote against the day being proclaimed a national holiday, as the regular Socialists proposed, hoping thereby to take the sting out of the Communists' plan.

By frustrating the regular Socialists' efforts, the sourgeois elements offended the latter and incited the hatred of undisciplined elements, which are now believed to be sure to stop all work and every wheel May 1, and it is quite unthinkable that a general strike all over Germany should not be accompanied by violence and riots, which will have a short road to anarchy. When the country is aflame in a hundred places simultaneously, even Noske's troops may fail to cope with the situation.

No one outside of Germany can possibly conceive the general discontent with the Government, though the latter is doubtless doing its best to save the sinking ship's crew, which is striking amid a raging storm. Certain measures of reform could easily have been effected and would have done much to cure a section of the masses of the acute hysteria with which they are suffering.

Fail to Escape Evils.

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent has interviewed a large number of people of all classes about their grievances against the Government and found them, with few exceptions, more of a sentimental than a material kind, indicating that the Republican Government understands the psychology of the masses and classes no better than the late Imperial Government. The masses argue:

"After five years of the most cruel war, general starvation, revolution and the establishment of a People's Government, we see hardly any change in public life. We are still starving and getting nothing for our money, while war millionaires and junkers strut about as arrogant and well fed as ever."

This is, perhaps, the strongest point made against the present rulers, and not only by the masses but also by large classes. For this reason, Federal Minister of Finance Schiffer, a Democrat, was at last compelled to resign. He promised great reforms, but never did anything, and permitted milliards in war profits to disappear from home. These fortunes were hidden, and many found their way across the frontiers. Much of this wealth has been squandered in shameful orgies. Hardly any of it can be reached by just taxation.

Again, army property estimated at energetic member of the Saxon Government besides the Premier, who was absent in the country and not expected back for several days. The Berlin military authorities were busy keeping down the revolutionary elements here, seven milliards in value has disappeared since demobilization and is now turning up again in illicit as well as legitimate trade, while the thousands of thieves, big and small, go unpunished. An enormous quantity of sugar hoarded by the army has been converted into all kinds of candies and is sold now openly in hundreds of candy shops that spring up daily in Berlin and other large cities. Everybody knows that this sugar was stolen, but nothing is done to punish the thieves.

Stolen Wealth Flaunted.

Rubber, cloth, leather, wine, cognac, coffee, tea, chocolate, automobiles, and hundreds of other articles stolen from the army depots may be bought today in the open market. The Government seems wholly incompetent to rescue public property and punish the robbers and receivers, who recklessly flaunt their illgotten wealth in the faces of the maddened people and squander fortunes in hundreds of gay night places and gambling clubs. Fifty-two of these night places were to be closed by order of the Police President issued recently, but the order has already been rescinded because the employes of the clubs protested.

The police force has become very much corrupted and unreliable, and lawlessness is waxing correspondingly. The Junkers still live on their entailed estates, rule the peasants, and enjoy their war gains unmolested by the tax collector. In Berlin the reactionaries are no longer secret in their burning desire for a return of the monarchy. At the recent Bismarck celebration 6,000 children were made to sing "Heil dir, im Siegerkranz," that hated hymn of the Hohenzollerns.

The names of the men who rule the provinces still have the prefix "von" in most cases and end with the syllables "itz" and "ow." Had the Government passed a law abolishing the nobility and titles much of the class hatred would have disappeared. It galls the masses to see such men as Ludendorff parade the streets and hear of banquets given to Prince Eitel Friedrich Hohenzollern by the Officers' Volunteer Corps at which his absent Majesty's health is drunk.

Workmen Steal Bread Cards.

In certain restaurants everything may be had for large prices, while the stores in the poor quarters are empty. If the workingman's bread ration does not suffice, he is compelled to buy a counterfeit or stolen bread card at 6 marks.

All kinds of stolen goods, from diamonds to shoes, are sold openly in the Berlin streets, and generally go to adorn those who had previously enriched themselves by theft or fraud, because the workingman has not the price demanded. Drivers of cabs exact five times the legal fare if they land you at night and alone, and if you refuse to pay they sometimes produce a heavy iron crank to support their demand.

Crime is rampant throughout Berlin and Germany. Criminals convicted of having shot Government soldiers' get off with six months in jail. The way in which Government justice operates incited the masses against the classes and even the masses against the masses to a degree never known before.

The atmosphere is fraught with murder and destruction, but it is more than doubtful that any other than the present Government could cope better with this unheard of situation. On the contrary, if Germany is still to be saved, only the present Government, it is believed, can do so, and any change would mean certain death.

LONDON, April 13.—How Odessa suffered from a systematic campaign of murder, robbery, and outrage after the first entry of the Bolsheviki on March 13, 1918, is described by the Rev. Courtier Forster, a British Chaplain at Odessa, in an article published in The Daily Chronicle. He says:

"If the brutal tyranny which the Bolsheviki compelled the terror-ridden Russian people to accept in the name of 'freedom of the mind and body' punishes all liberty of thought with torture, outrage, and death, freedom of the body is equally travestied by unthinkable cruelties, unless the term is accepted as synonymous with bestial indecency and moral depravity. Women and girls engaged in shopping commissions in the lower parts of the town were seized by bands of men from the Red Army and carried off to warehouse yards and similar places, where their fate was worse than death. Indeed, in many instances they were found dead on the following morning. Orgies which defy description were of daily occurrence.

"Wine shops and cellars were by degrees broken into and looted. Throughout the city free drinks from pails and buckets were given to all who cared for them. Women returning from market in the morning were stopped and compelled to drink from pails held on high by two soldiers. On one afternoon it was my fate to come away from a shop and find the streets running red, with hundreds of gallons of wine pouring from smashed vats of a great store. Numbers of Bolsheviki lay flat on the pavement, with faces in the gutter, drinking from the stream which flowed past, carrying with it the accumulated filth and refuse of the uncleansed city.

"The brutality of assassination increased daily. There lived, a few houses further down the street in which I had my quarters, a young wife and little son of a junior officer who was at the time in Petrograd. She went one day to draw her allowance, which amounted to only a few pounds. Small as the sum was, it aroused the cupidity of a few watchful Bolsheviki. On the following morning her apartment was found looted and she and her boy lay dead in bed, pierced through and through with thrusts from bayonets.

"In the same street, the Kanatnaya, another ghastly affair came to my notice. One morning two quietly dressed ladies were standing at a corner awaiting the coming of a tramcar. A party of Bolsheviki approached and noticed them as members of the persecuted 'bourgeois' class. Without the formality of any arrest or the mockery of a trial, both were shot dead on the pavement at the street corner.

"It is a return of this wanton brutality and reign of terror which awaits those harassed and luckless citizens who find themselves once again in the clutches of the Red Army. Odessa has fallen, and Soviet Russia thrills with triumph at the defeat of the Allies. The effect on the armies of Denekine and Koltchak will be immediate. The anti-Bolshevist allies of the Entente will be weakened and disheartened. God help those who fall into the power of Lenine's armies! For a mortal blow has been struck at the prestige of the Entente in the home of Bolshevism."

TROTZKY ADMITS DEFEATS.

Says Ekaterinburg, Perm, and Ufa Must Be Captured.

LONDON, April 14.—Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevist Minister of War and Marine of Russia, admits defeat on the eastern front in a wireless message from Moscow which has been picked up here. The message reads:

"All our efforts must now be directed to the eastern front, which is the only front upon which we have suffered defeats. We must send old and experienced troops to that quarter. It is absolutely necessary for us to capture Ekaterinburg, Perm, and Ufa."

COPENHAGEN, April 14.—The entire male population of Riga between 18 and 38 years of age has been mobilized by the Bolsheviki, according to a Libau dispatch to the Lettish Press Bureau. The Bolsheviki are also reported to have seized three influential citizens as hostages and taken them to Russia.

BELGIUM TO DEMAND KAISER'S EXTRADITION

Death Penalty or Banishment Expected for German Chiefs Accused of Crime.

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, April 14.—The former Kaiser and the other German malefactors will be tried before a tribunal formulated along the lines of the League of Nations for violating treaties and rupturing the world's morality.

I am in a position to state that the commission investigating responsibility for the war and responsibility for criminal acts during the war has compiled a report which has been signed by all except the Japanese.

This report condemns the Kaiser, the Crown Prince, Von Hindenburg, Ludendorff, and Von Tirpitz, as well as the German officers who directed the submarine and air bombing campaigns and a number of Germans in charge of prison and concentration camps during the war.

The extradition of the Kaiser will be demanded by Belgium through the League of Nations, and as The Netherlands will be a member of the League, it is not expected there will be any difficulty in bringing the Kaiser personally before the world court. It is believed the death penalty or banishment surely will be inflicted upon the German leaders responsible for the cruelties and crimes committed during the war.

The American Commission did not favor extraditing or trying the Kaiser upon the responsibility for the war, owing to the fact that any ruling sovereign always has had the right to make war in the past and the Allies could not seize upon the Kaiser as the first exception with fairness.

Secretary of State Lansing favored merely writing into some lasting document, like the peace treaty, a clause denouncing the Kaiser and the German military leaders for throwing the world into war, and thus indirectly holding them responsible for the millions killed and maimed.

However, Lloyd George and Clemenceau held out for trial of the principal enemy criminals and used this demand as a trading point with the Americans upon the reparations claims, as the American financial experts stood out solidly for a small and reasonable sum which the Germans could be expected to pay. Finally President Wilson affixed his signature to the report as drafted.

Study the list below. It may suggest the answer to a puzzling question.

Handling of the investments involved in managing willed property calls for a high degree of business ability.

Has your family got it?

If you will look over this list of nine everyday business errors, you can perhaps judge for yourself:

9 everyday business errors

1. Neglecting to get receipts when bills are paid in cash.
2. Neglecting to keep receipts where they can be located.
3. Neglecting to check up items in current bills.
4. Inability to keep checkbook balanced.
5. Too easy optimism in starting credit accounts.
6. Careless handling of valuable business papers.
7. Signing documents without knowing their contents.
8. Tendency to establish living expenses which would exceed income and eat into savings.
9. Tendency to invest money on dangerous hearsay — without proper knowledge of facts.

IF you question your family's ability to handle your estate in a businesslike manner, you may be interested in the estate-handling service which we offer to men with property.

This service includes the direction of all estate investments by a permanent TRUST COMMITTEE, selected from our Board of Directors.

With this TRUST COMMITTEE the President of the Company serves in an ex-officio capacity.

Such a business arrangement, in the interest of your heirs, can be made very simply. We shall be glad to explain any details.

CHAFE AT DELAY IN OCEAN FLIGHT

pleted a monoplane which was to have started from St. John's, the scene of the present venture. This machine was to have been flown by Gustave Hamel, who, it will be remembered, while flying from London to Paris, came down at Calais, ascended again and has never since been heard of. He is believed to have been drowned, and no trace of his machine was ever found.

Raynham is 25 years old, unmarried, and began to fly at 17, being the possessor of half a dozen of the oldest flying licenses in England. Most of his experience has been in experimental and test flying, but he refused to particularize about this beyond saying that he had had the usual accidents and did not recall winning very many competitions.

Raynham went with Martinsydes in the early development days of 1907 and was with them when they began monoplane production in 1908. This they continued until the war began, when they turned to building biplanes, the present machine being only a very slight modification of their latest fighting scout. Raynham's own faith is still in the monoplane, which he regards as the most efficient machine, but because of awkwardness in handling needs greater housing space. On account of its extra wing spread and other technical reasons he doubts very much if the monoplane will ever come into commercial use.

Martinsydes, he said, while regarding the transatlantic flight as a purely sporting venture not to be repeated on a commercial basis for some time to come, has entered it with practically a stock machine, assembled in seven weeks from parts taken from the store room in order to demonstrate the dependability of their airplane and the commercial development possibilities. For this reason they will fly it, whether Hawker and Grieve, in the Sopwith, beat them across or not. The machine which can accomplish the flight, they believe, will, with slight modifications, prove remarkably useful for general utility purposes, as a suitable reduction in the fuel capacity, dmittedly abnormal, would change the machine's adaptability.

It was this desire to demonstrate the workaday commercial possibilities of the machine that led Raynham and Morgan to discard all "stunts" and tricks and base their entire hopes upon the abifity to carry a great fuel load and keep up straight flying.

Raymore has a wing span 41 feet in length and a main plane surface just over 500 square feet. The body of the machine is painted scarlet. The machine seats are arranged tandem, the navigator sitting in front and slightly lower than the pilot, the fuselage being not quite wide enough to permit them to sit side by side.

Cruising Speed of 100 Miles.

Communication is to be by means of the Gosport phone, unless, as Raynham puts it, "we decide to leave it behind with other gadgets, in which case the pair will shout to each other above the engine noise or write on a pad fixed between them within reach of each." The engine, a Rolls-Royce Falcon, is rated at 280 horse power, but is really developing 300, and is geared down a little more than two to one, practically the same ratio as the engine in the Eagle in the Sopwith. The cruising speed is 100 miles, but the machine can do 125 miles an hour. The propeller is two-bladed.

Raynham and Morgan will wear life waistcoats and ordinary flying clothes, instead of the rubber life saving suits adopted by Hawker and Grieve. Raynham said:

"We think if a fellow is going to drop in he may as well go down as float around and freeze."

They carry no life boat, as does Hawker. The pilot believes that the drift will be compensated automatically by north and south winds driving the machine off its course about an equal distance in each direction, but the meteorological experts think it is more likely to predominate in one direction, and he may be forced to alter his course somewhat once he gets aloft.

"The ideal course," Raynham said, "would pass just south of Ireland, striking over England about Land's End, but we will fly enough north to cross Ireland so that we can descend there if necessary. When the machine gets about the middle of the Irish Channel, where it is some sixty miles wide, we can decide whether we can go on to Brooklands or must turn back to Ireland. We will not risk it unless we are sure we can get there, as there is no use in crossing the ocean and then getting a ducking in the channel.

"At 15,000 feet we shall have a planing radius of thirty miles and anticipate no difficulty in landing, as the country is fairly flat. The only difficulty will be the stone fences in Ireland, but the fields are generally large.

"The ideal flight would be to start at 1,000 feet, keeping the wings at an angle of 3 degrees, which happens to be the most efficient for our particular machine. If we could start at that and gradually rise automatically because of loss of weight we would reach 15,000 feet at the end of twenty hours. This is theoretical, however, and the actual flying height depends on the weather conditions.

"It is rather doubtful if one can fly at a height of 15,000 feet, or even 10,000, all the way, as it may prove altogether too cold, though we shall have electric asbestos foot warmers and gloves. For navigation we are depending upon an ordinary sextant and compass and carrying no wireless sending set, but only a receiver, from which we may get our position from ships if lucky. We shall not drop the undercarriage and try a landing without it, as Hawker expects to do, as we want to keep the flight within ordinary every-day conditions."

Raynham and Morgan are flying for no bonuses, Raynham explaining that it is all in the day's work and insisting that the Martinsyde people will be entitled to the credit if successful. The pilot has already flown continuously seven hours and thirty minutes.

Captain Morgan, R. A. F., F. R. G. S., late Royal Navy navigator, joined the Royal Navy in 1904 as a cadet. He qualified as a navigating officer and served at sea until 1914, when he obtained a certificate as a flying pilot. Captain Morgan served until 1918, was wounded several times and lost a leg when shot down, but resumed flying when he left the hospital. He wears a wooden leg.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., April 14, (Associated Press.)—The chances of Harry G. Hawker starting within the next day or two in an attempt to fly across the Atlantic were further diminished tonight, when a drizzling rain set in again.

Captain F. P. Raynham, who is rushing the work of assembling his Martinsyde machine in time to take the air as soon as Hawker's Sopwith, dined tonight with his rival. He is planning, if possible, to make a trial flight tomorrow.

ESCORT MACHINES WAIT IN IRELAND

To Start if Hawker Approaches —Wood Tells Difficulties of Westward Flight.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 14.—At Fermoy, County Cork, a squadron of Royal Air Force machines is in readiness to proceed to the southwest coast of Ireland, if Hawker's approach is signaled, to escort him part of his way.

Government tugs are awaiting news of the start, and will patrol the coast as soon as they receive the signal. One will proceed 200 miles due west of Cape Clear, the most southerly point in Ireland, where it is though Hawker will first sight land.

The giant Handley-Page biplane, which is entered for The Daily Mail prize, has been packed for shipment to Newfoundland, whence a start will be made about the middle of May.

The Shortt machine, in which Major Wood and Captain Wyllie propose to attempt the westward flight from Ireland, has undergone a final tuning up. Questioned regarding their prospects, Major Wood replied:

"The prospects are good if we once get a right start. Our task will be more difficult than that of the pilots who start from the other side. The general direction of the wind favors them, but is against us.

"If we succeed, I estimate that it will take us 30 hours, while the airmen crossing the other way may do it in under 20 hours. Had there been time I should have gone to the other side. But our machine has had to be built and our preparations made in five weeks. So we were obliged to start from England. Any competitor, from whichever side of the Atlantic he starts, may have to make several attempts before he gets properly off."

The Shortt machine will start with a total weight of about 4,800 pounds, which will decrease as its petrol supply of 600 gallons becomes exhausted. The machine has a speed of 85 to 95 miles per hour, and carries enough fuel for a continuous flight of about 42 hours. It is proposed to fly at a height of about 6,000 feet.

LONDON, April 14, (Associated Press.)—Vickers, Ltd., are about to start a transatlantic service with airships which the company was building for the British Navy, when the armistice was signed and which are no longer needed. The Pall Mall Gazette says. The passenger rate will be £48, and mail will be carried at the rate of £405 a ton.

The pioneer ship will have a gas capacity of 1,200,000 cubic feet and engines of 1,000 horse power. Larger ships are being designed to carry 200 passengers.

REPORTS FOG OFF ST. JOHN'S.

Weather Man Predicts Fair Conditions in Two or Three Days.

Resumption of the detailed daily weather reports from points along the Atlantic Ocean, the island of Bermuda, the Azores, and Sable Island is announced by J. H. Kimball, meteorologist of the United States Weather Bureau here, on the same scale prevailing before the war. The entry of the United States into the war resulted in a curtailment of the reports owing to the possibility of German ships picking up weather information. The reports were resumed April 1.

Interest centred in the weather reports at this time because of the projected transatlantic air flights from Newfoundland in competition for the $50,000 London Daily Mail prize. Mr. Kimball said yesterday that reports indicated rain and heavy fog off Newfoundland. "A storm is indicated," he continued, "and another is right back of it on the mainland, although a fair weather area is indicated throughout the Middle Atlantic States. This latter area shows a tendency to favorable weather conditions in the next two or three days, which may permit the transatlantic aviators to begin their contemplated flight. At present, if aviators attempted a start, they would run into a region of fog and snow flurries off the Grand Banks."

BASES FOR AMERICAN FLIGHT.

Lieut. Com. Bellinger Reports on Newfoundland Inspection.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Lieut. Commander P. N. L. Bellinger, who was assigned on the cruise of the destroyer Barney to Newfoundland to observe possible starting places for the naval seaplanes on their overseas flight, submitted his report today to Commander John H. Towers, in charge of the Transatlantic flight section of the Naval Air Service.

Commander Bellinger visited a number of places in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, but the names of these places and other information in his report were withheld.

NAVY CONSIDERS AIR ROUTES.

Public to be Notified in Advance of Ocean Flight from Rockaway.

Lieutenant Commander Harold W. Schofield, Navy Aviation Aid, at 280 Broadway, interviewed yesterday on the subject of the trial flights now being conducted at Rockaway by passenger carrying planes under the supervision of the Navy Department, said that the public, through the newspapers, would be notified definitely twenty-four hours before the date of the projected American transatlantic flight.

He said there would probably be completed three of the N. C. type of machines to be ready for the flight. The start, he said, would certainly be made at Rockaway and the aircraft would follow a course parallel to and hugging the Atlantic coast as far as Newfoundland. The exact route has not been decided on, he said. The relative advantages of two or three courses are now under consideration.

SAYS THOMPSON ASKED $15,000 LOAN

He said in reply to questions that he attended many conferences and saw the Senator a great many times. He said Frank Moss, Clarence J. Shuster of Rochester, J. Frank Smith of Lockport, of counsel for the committee, and lawyers representing public service corporations were in attendance at these conferences.

Never Talked Trust Company.

"Did you have any conversations or conferences with Senator Thompson when these other persons were not present?" the witness was asked.

"I should say not," was his answer.

"Did you have any conversation with Senator Thompson in that period in which the matter of a trust company in Lockport or Middleport was mentioned?"

"At no time, never!" said the witness. "The first intimation I had of any such subject was what I saw in the public press one night last week. I have never had any conversation with Senator Thompson or anyone else, so far as I can remember, about the organization of a trust company."

Senator Thompson gazed at the witness, smiling wanly.

Mr. Thomas was then questioned regarding his relations with Richard Henry Burke, who on oath has denied that he tried to buy the support of Senator Thompson for the Carson-Martin bill with the promise of a $500,000 campaign fund to help the Senator land the Governorship. The Senator testified that he first mentioned the business opportunities of trust companies up State incidentally in a conversation at which Burke was present, and that it was subsequent to this conversation that Thomas made the offer. Senator Thompson also testified that after the offer had been made by Thomas, Burke asked him if he had been approached by the treasurer of the gas company with regard to the trust company project.

Mr. Thomas said he first met Burke through Senator Thompson and saw him frequently in Senator Thompson's quarters.

"He brought Public Service Commission galley proofs to our office," he added. "I thought he was an employe of the committee."

"After the adjournment of the Legislature in 1917, did you see Mr. Burke?' asked Mr. Cheney.

"Very casually," said the witness, adding that he had not discussed legislation with Mr. Burke at any of these meetings and did not know whom Mr. Burke represented at Albany.

"Has the Consolidated Gas Company an agent here?" Mr. Thomas was asked.

"Not to my knowledge," he replied. "If we had, I would be apt to know, because I would have approved the bills."

"When did you last see Mr. Burke?" asked Chairman Burlingame.

"I do not think I saw him for a year until last Saturday afternoon, when I met him on Fifth Avenue. We just passed the time of day. Somebody was with him."

Mr. Thomas was excused with the understanding that if wanted he should appear again.

Burke Supplies Credentials.

Richard H. Burke then took the stand, his second appearance. He expressed a desire to correct some minor typographical errors which had crept into the record of his testimony and asked permission to address the committee. This was granted.

"In the confusion of answering questions that were put to me by a number of Senators at the last session," said Mr. Burke, "I may have been unable to forcibly impress you with the fact that upon every occasion when a meeting was arranged with Mr. Stanchfield or with Mr. Brady, it was arranged at the request and solicitation of Senator Thompson himself."

Mr. Burke said he was anxious to place the committee in possession of evidence to prove his credibility.

"I think, in justice to this committee and myself, being charged with felony, I should be allowed to prove beyond the question of a doubt the truth of my statement," said Mr. Burke, impressively. He then gave a recital of his various occupations. He said his first official job was under William Travers Jerome when the latter was District Attorney of New York County, he had helped convict a man charged with murder. Next he was Superintendent of the Goddard Anti-Policy Society, which he said had "cleaned out policy from one end of New York to the other.

"My predecessor," he said, "was shot dead on the steps of the County court house; that is the position I took when they chased me into all the hell holes in New York."

He said his third position was a Deputy Commissioner of the Aqueduct police.

"Without going into details," he went on, "I will mention one fact that will impress you with my standing in this State. I brought about the electrocution of eight men in one day in Sing Sing Prison. I will not tell you of the thousands of felonies brought to the attention of courts of different counties during the five years I occupied that position."

Mr. Burke wound up by saying he had letters of endorsement from Judges, District Attorneys and Sheriffs in every county along the east side of the Hudson River and from Justices Henry P. Dugro and Adelbert P. Rich of the Appellate Division in New York City, which he would submit to the Committee, together with letters from the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer and from the late Captain F. Norton Goddard. He said these letters were received by him when he was a candidate for a Deputy Police Commissionership in New York City. Mr. Burke said that his latest public or quasi-public work was for the Thompson Investigating Committee.

"I went to work with the Committee at the request of Senator Thompson," said the witness. "I worked with him for a year and a half, and he himself has told you that I served him faithfully."

"What were you paid for these services?" asked Chairman Burlingame.

"I am still to be paid," said the witness. "I didn't receive a penny."

Nicholas F. Brady Appears.

The next witness was Nicholas F. Brady, who said he appeared voluntarily and was anxious for a hearing. He said he lived at 411 State Street, this city, and had a New York residence at 980 Fifth Avenue. Mr. Brady said he was Chairman of the Board of Directors of the New York Edison Company, a Director of the Brooklyn Edison Company, the Consolidated Gas Company, the United Electric Light and Power Company, the New York and Queens Gas and Electric Light Company, the Westchester Light and Power Company, President of the New York Edison and Brooklyn Edison Company, and a Director of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company.

"Are you acquainted with Senator Thompson?" he was asked.

"Slightly," said Mr. Brady. "I first saw him two years ago in my office at 54 Wall Street. The interview was at his request. Judge Samuel W. Beardsley of our counsel brought him."

"What was the reason?" asked Mr. Cheney.

"None that I can see, except that he wanted to meet me."

"You had a social conversation?"

"It lasted only two or three minutes," said Mr. Brady.

"You did not discuss legislation?"

"No. He only said that he wanted me to see that he was all right, that he was not as black as he had been painted."

Mr. Brady said the interview at his home, regarding which testimony has been given both by Senator Thompson and Mr. Burke, was arranged for by the latter over the telephone and occurred on March 1.

"Thompson started in to tell me about the general scheme he had for the conservation and development of the natural resources of the State, including water power," said Mr. Brady. "I asked him to put his scheme in writing, and said I would be very glad to let him have my criticism for what it was worth. We talked a little bit about the traction situation in the State. I pointed out that we could not forever keep on giving ten cents' worth of service for five cents. He asked me for some figures. I told him I would give him some figures indicative of the trend. I sent him some. They were only indicative, and not conclusive."

"Was that all there was to your conversation?" asked Mr. Cheney.

"Yes," said the witness, "except that he said that every one down in New York thought he had horns and hoofs, and he wanted me to know that he was a regular fellow."

"Did he say he was going to give you a square deal?"

"Not in that way," said Mr. Brady. "He tried to convey to me and left the distinct impression that he was open-minded on the subject of traction."

In regard to his relations with Mr. Burke, Mr. Brady said he first met him in 1914, in connection with a contract with the Federal Signal Company, for which Burke was salesman, and had seen him nine or ten times since.

"Did you ever meet him with regard to legislative matters?" Mr. Brady was asked.

"No. Every time he came in he would tell me everything he knew. I cannot specifically recall that he said anything about legislation."

"Is he in your employ?" asked Senator Black of Kings. The question was answered in the negative.

Chairman Burlingame wanted Mr. Brady to give the exact language of his interview with Senator Thompson. Mr. Brady said he could not recall it, adding:

"He left a distinct impression that, if I could show him that the traction companies were entitled to a review by the Public Service Commission—and that's all the bill provides for—he would stand for it."

In reply to other questions, Mr. Brady said Neile F. Towner of Albany represented the Municipal Gas Company, in which the Bradys are heavily interested, before legislative committees. He said the law firm of Beardsley, Hemmins & Taylor, which represented other companies in which he was interested, were in a better position than he to tell about representation of those concerns before the Legislature.

"Do you know anything about the slush fund in Albany?" Mr. Brady was asked.

"Only what I have read in the newspapers," said the witness with a smile.

Q.—Did Thompson talk to you about the Governorship? A.—No.

Q.—Did anybody else? A.—Not to my recollection.

Q.—Did any of your companies ever retain Senator Thompson? A.—No.

Q.—Were you ever asked to interest yourself in a trust company in Lockport or Middleport, (Senator Thompson's home)? A.—Never heard of it.

Mr. Brady said the scheme Thompson suggested for the relief of the traction situation in New York was first, that a small committee be appointed to investigate and find out whether the companies were entitled to relief.

"I told him," said Mr. Brady, "that such an inquiry would be an autopsy, rather than an operation to save the patient. Then he said he wanted figures."

"Was anything said about who was to be Chairman of that committee?"

"He left the impression that he was to be Chairman himself," said Mr. Brady.

"Did you ever make a request for an interview with Senator Thompson?"

"Never! Burke said Thompson wanted to see me."

"Have you ever heard of any scheme to finance anyone's campaign for Governor?"

"Not more than you hear every year in relation to both parties. Burke and Thompson never said anything about it."

Interviews with Stanchfield.

Richard H. Burke was recalled. Mr. Cheney called attention to his testimony that an interview he arranged for Senator Thompson with John B. Stanchfield was not Senator Thompson's first visit to the corporation lawyer's office. Asked the dates of prior meetings, he said the first one was in December, 1917, while the Thompson Investigating Committee was preparing its report. The interview was held in Mr. Stanchfield's office in New York. Burke was not present, although he had arranged for that interview.

"Some two weeks before," he went on, "or a week before—I cannot recall which—Senator Thompson, who was in New York at the time, said he was very anxious to see Mr. Stanchfield. I said: 'I will try and arrange a meeting.' He told me that, as Stanchfield was a lawyer of great repute, he might be of some benefit to him in the future, as he intended to go into the law business in New York.

"I took him to Mr. Stanchfield's office. Mr. Stanchfield had met him at the meetings of the Public Service Commission. He was counsel, I think, for Mr. Shonts. I said, 'Mr. Stanchfield, you have met Mr. Thompson before.' Mr. Thompson walked in and sat down and I walked out."

Q. Did you wait for Senator Thompson. A. I did.

Q. When he came out, did you have any talk with him in reference to his conversation with Mr. Stanchfield? A. No, sir. I asked no questions, and he did not volunteer any information.

Q. Did you arrange for any other interviews with Mr. Stanchfield? A. Yes, sir. The three interviews Mr. Thompson had with Mr. Stanchfield I arranged for. The last one was about March 1.

Q. This was after the interview of Feb. 6 that you told us about Friday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were there any interviews arranged for by you between the one in 1917 and the one of Feb. 6, 1919? A. There was an interview arranged. I cannot recall what took place, but I know the object of the interview.

"What did Senator Thompson tell you about that?" Mr. Burke was asked.

"He told me he wanted to destroy some letters that formed part of the records of the committee. He said he did not want to destroy them in my presence, and he did not want them given to me, but would destroy them if somebody could make arrangements whereby he would be positive that Mr. Shonts knew that the destruction of the letters took place afterward. Senator Thompson said he went to the home of a Mr. Pepperman, who was secretary to Mr. Shonts, and, without letting Mr. Pepperman see the letters, threw them into a fireplace in Mr. Pepperman's home. That is all I know about the letters."

"Did Senator Thompson tell you what the general pupport of the letters was?" asked Senator Burlingame.

Letters Stolen From Shonts.

"No, sir," replied the witness. "He did say that the letters were given to him and that they were stolen from Mr. Shonts by Mrs. Shonts and Mrs. Shonts's daughter, the Duchess de Chaulnes. He said they were an attack on Shonts, and I think he said they were an attack on the late James J. Brady, 'Diamond Jim.' He said the letters were given to him confidentially by Mrs. Shonts—when he mentioned confidentially, of course I stopped. I didn't ask any questions about it."

"Now," said Mr. Cheney, "tell us about the interview with Mr. Stanchfield, about March 1."

"Have I got to go into a man's private life?" asked the witness. "Is it germane to this investigation that I should discuss the application for a loan from Senator Thompson to myself or John B. Stanchfield?"

"Absolutely," ruled Chairman Burlinghame.

"It was apparently perfectly legitimate," said the witness. "Senator Thompson in 1917 was in the Biltmore Hotel with three gentlemen organizing a furniture company. Senator Thompson said that he wanted to borrow $15,000. I said, 'George, why don't you make the application to your bank?' He said, 'I cannot get $15,000 in a small bank in Middleport. I went to see a banker today, and he wanted 40 per cent., with security.'

"Instead of going to Stanchfield, I went into Judge Beardsley's office and said, 'Judge, I have a perfectly legitimate request to make of you. Thompson wants to borrow $15,000.' He said, 'I wouldn't lend him 15 cents.'"

Laughter swept the Senate chamber. A smile flitted across Senator Thompson's face.

"I was kind of surprised when Judge Beardsley made that remark," the witness went on, "for the simple reason that Senator Thompson told me he had perfectly legitimate security to put up as collateral—stock of the Middleport Gas and Electric Light Company, of which he was President. I went back to Thompson and I said to him, 'the best people to determine the collateral of the Middleport Gas and Electric Light Company is your bank in Middleport, from what Judge Beardsley intimated to me.'

"He got to talking to me about this loan, and rising around, as Mr. Brady said, or words to that effect. He didn't say anything—only in enigmas—and one day went down to Mr. Stanchfield; and I think I talked to Mr. Stanchfield about the $15,000 loan. I won't be sure; Mr. Stanchfield will remember it if I did. Whoever I talked to gave me the gate. They didn't take any notice of it."

"You haven't told us yet what there was about this interview with Mr. Stanchfield about March 1," said Mr. Cheney.

"The interview—Thompson talked to me in the Republican Club. I wish some of the ladies would leave. I am going to use some very foul language," said the witness, at which there was more laughter.

"Just leave out the foul language and give us the substance," said Chairman Burlingame.

"The language will be the impression created," said the witness in rueful protest.

"You can give it in blank," said Mr. Cheney consolingly.

"All right. I will give it in blank, and in private, or before this committee in a room, I will give you the exact language, if necessary," said Mr. Burke. "I went down to the Republican Club. Thompson telephoned the next day.

"This was the day after you saw Brady?"

"Red Mike" Long-Winded.

"Yes, Sir, that will be the 2d of March. He said that four or five days previous he had been 'round to see 'Red Mike.' I asked him who 'Red Mike' was, and he said, 'Mayor Hylan.'

"'I went in there for a conversation of fifteen minutes,' he said, 'and the son of a this, that, and the other kept me there four hours and a half. He talked about everything imaginable, including the traction companies.'

"Then the Senator produced a letter which he read to me and he said, 'I think I am against these traction companies.' I said, 'What has made you change your mind?' He said, 'Well, they don't seem to be able to give me just what I want.' I said, 'What do you want, Senator?' 'Well,' he said, 'I want to get something to show that they are entitled to this seven-cent fare.'

"Then he started in reading the letter and he read it very forcibly. The letter was a very drastic arraignment of the traction companies of New York. He took the letter this way," said Mr. Burke, picking up a sheet of paper and flaunting it violently, "and he said, 'I am going to give that to The Associated Press tonight.' I looked for it next morning in every paper in New York, but I did not find the letter.

"Who was it from?" asked Senator Knight of Wyoming.

"It was from Senator George F. Thompson to Mayor Hylan of New York City. He was reading the letter that he was going to send. That was the last of that letter."

"What was the nature of it, Mr. Burke? Just give us an outline," urged Senator Burlingame.

"He went on to say he didn't think the companies deserved relief. I didn't think it was on the level."

Mr. Burke said Senator Thompson showed him another letter on the occasion of this visit.

Appealed to Rockefeller.

"The other letter," he said, "was to John D. Rockefeller, Jr. It was a long letter, in which he said the State would greatly benefit if Mr. Rockefeller would get into his scheme for the development of the natural resources of the State and combine all gas and electric companies from Buffalo to New York City, including the Middleport Gas and Electric Company. He wanted me to introduce him to Rockefeller. I knew that this was his great big dream. I said I couldn't give him an introduction to Rockefeller, but I would get Brady to do so."

Mr. Burke said Thompson also asked him to exercise his good offices with John B. Stanchfield in connection with his plans.

"If Stanchfield can get to Speaker Sweet and Majority Leader Walters of the Senate, I can be Chairman of that committee to investigate the traction situation," Mr. Burke said Senator Thompson told him.

"The purpose of the committee," said the witness, "was a superficial investigation of traction conditions, financial and otherwise, in New York City."

"Did he ask you to arrange for an interview with Stanchfield?"

"He did, about a week later, the next time he came to New York City."

"Were you present at the interview?"

"No. I asked Mr. Stanchfield about the interview. He said there was no chance for an investigation, the time was too short. 'Here it is March,' he said, 'and the Legislature will adjourn on April 15. There is no chance. I can't help Thompson.'"

This concluded the testimony of Mr. Burke for the time being.

John B. Stanchfield, who had been invited to testify, sent word through his private secretary that he was suffering from influenza and would be confined to his bed for days. Chairman Burlingame directed that a subpoena be issued for him, to the end that a doctor's certificate be produced and steps be taken to procure the testimony of Mr. Stanchfield at his home at the earliest possible moment.

HOLD FLOOR TO BLOCK ADJOURNMENT MOVE

Democratic Minority Members Talking Against Time While Senators Speed to Albany.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Tuesday, April 15.—At 2 o'clock this morning business in the Senate was at a complete standstill while the members of the Democratic minority were talking against time in a determined effort to prevent the adoption of a concurrent resolution providing for final adjournment of the legislative session on Saturday. This would involve the defeat of the major part of Governor Smith's legislative program, and make an extraordinary session necessary.

The Old Guard element of the Republican majority in both the Senate and Assembly have nurtured this plan for weeks as a means of avoiding awkward debate and action in the open on the feminist measures providing for industrial safeguards for working women, which Governor Smith and the Democratic minority have espoused. Opposition to these bills created a split in the Republican majority in the Senate last week, which made it possible for the Democrats to bring about the passage of the bills there. They are now being held in the custody of the Assembly Rules Committee under agreement with Speaker Sweet that they shall not be reported out.

The Republican Insurgents of last week had agreed to make common cause with the Democrats in a move to prevent the adoption of a resolution for final adjournment until the Rules Committee had disposed these measures. The Assembly voted on them in the open and other measures of importance, pending before the lawmaking body, had received consideration as well. Under the circumstances the hands of the Republican leaders were tied, but last night when the Senate convened the absence of three Democratic members gave Senator Walters an opportunity which he was not slow in taking advantage of. The contention of the Republicans was that a resolution can be adopted by a majority vote of those present and voting. This claim is being fiercely contested by the Democrats who are on the firing line to prevent the defeat of the Democratic legislative program.

The Democratic absentees are Senators Miller of New York, Sutherland of Kings, and Lynch of Richmond.

There are four Republican insurgents, Senators Davenport of Oneida, Fowler of Chautauqua, Graves of Erie, and Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara.

Senator Walters brought up the resolution soon after the Senate met. When Senator James A. Foley, leader of the minority, divined his purpose he sent for the missing Democrats and in the meantime instructed his members present to talk against time and the arrival of Senators Lynch and Sutherland. Senator Miller had been excused because of the Jewish holidays, but he had left his vote with Senator Foley.

The missing Senators are said to have left New York on the 1130 o'clock train and are expected here about 8 o'clock this morning.

War Finance Bond Purchase.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank yesterday announced that of the total of $200,000,000 one-year 5 per cent. bonds of the War Finance Corporation distributed throughout the United States $85,748,000, or more than 42 per cent. of the total subscription, had been subscribed and allotted in full to the New York Federal Reserve District.

Goin' a Fishin'?

It's time. Over a month ago you were wishin'.

Things are movin', down around the river. The early chap's already wadin' in the creek.

Come on! Get your tackle ready! Never had such a Spring before.

Season's a good three weeks ahead o' itself—streams all low and clear.

The March Brown an' the Whirlin' Dun are already flyin'—an' maybe the trout don't know it!

Come on up to Abercombie & Fitch an' get some flies, an' a rod—we're goin' tomorrow!

Some o' the Abercrombie & Fitch Things to Fish With

Listen, fishermen—this is the greatest fishing tackle department in America.

Some complain of scarcity, but we're plentifully supplied.

Nature has protected the fingerling and the fry—and we have protected the fisherman.

English dry flies, in the real trout-tempting patterns.

The Fly Rod Wriggler, and a 3¼ ounce Tonradif fly rod, seven feet long!

A Baby Grand landing net—weight, two ounces; a Rainbow reel—and split-willow baskets bound in leather.

A short two-ounce Gnome rod, invented for the small brush streams in the Cumberland valley, where General Grant did his fishing.

Fly-books, tackle cases, lunch kits, flasks (for tea)—spliced lines of our own splicing.

Clothes for Fishermen and Fisherwomen

Tweeds and gabardines—coats and raincoats—flannel shirts and leather waistcoats.

Waders, wading stockings, wading shoes, wading trousers—and high rubber boots.

Coats and skirts, hats and boots for fisherwomen.

CHOICE TO BE GIVEN LOAN SUBSCRIBERS

May Take the Tax Exempt 3¾ Per Cent. Notes or the 4¾ Per Cent. Issue.

MESSAGES APPROVE LOAN

DISTRICT QUOTAS ALLOTTED

New York Must Raise $1,350,000,000—Local Bankers Pleased and Predict Success.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Subscriptions will be received during the Victory Liberty Loan campaign for the wholly tax-exempt notes bearing 3¾ per cent. interest, which the Treasury will issue as alternatives to the 4¾ per cent. securities with partial tax exemption. Emphasis will be laid by solicitors on the 4¾ notes, and an effort will be made to round up the bulk of subscriptions to these securities, which may be converted at any time into the 3¾ per cent. notes.

A limited amount of the 4¾ per cent. notes will be available for outright sale, but the Treasury is not sure that all demands for cash purchases can be filled.

As in past campaigns, work has been rushed at the Bureau of Engraving on the bonds of small denominations, since these constitute most of the over-the-counter sales. There will be plenty of the notes for use as "samples" by salesmen, officials said today.

Gratification over the $4,500,000,000 total of the loan, which is smaller than had been generally expected and the interest rate, was expressed today in hundreds of telegrams reaching the Treasury from Loan Committees throughout the country. Many of these were to the effect that the terms had raised the hopes of loan workers and financial observers.

Officials discussing the terms of the loan said that one reason for their belief that the market price of bonds of past issues would not be depressed by the new securities, was that there was expected to exist a strong demand for the older issues by large taxpayers. With a certain arrangement of holdings of past issues, it is possible to hold $160,000 of bonds absolutely tax free.

Federal Reserve district loan quotas by percentages and amounts were announced today as follows:

| | P. C. | Amount. |
|---|---|---|
| New York | 30 | $1,350,000,000 |
| Chicago | 14½ | 652,500,000 |
| Cleveland | 10 | 450,000,000 |
| Boston | 8⅓ | 375,000,000 |
| Philadelphia | 8⅓ | 375,000,000 |
| San Francisco | 6 7-10 | 301,500,000 |
| Richmond | 4⅔ | 210,000,000 |
| St. Louis | 4⅓ | 195,000,000 |
| Kansas City | 4⅓ | 195,000,000 |
| Minneapolis | 3½ | 157,500,000 |
| Atlanta | 3 2-10 | 144,000,000 |
| Dallas | 2 1-10 | 94,500,000 |

Secretary Glass is expected to sound the keynote for the loan campaign in his address tomorrow night in New York. He plans to leave on Friday for a two-weeks speaking tour of the West and in the last week of the drive he will speak in New England and the East.

BANKERS HERE PRAISE VICTORY LOAN TERMS

Its Small Amount and Interchangeability Plan Approved and Its Success Predicted.

Bankers in Wall Street yesterday expressed unqualified satisfaction with the terms of the Victory Loan as announced on Sunday by Secretary of the Treasury Glass. The smallness of the loan, $4,500,000,000, as opposed to the $6,000,000,000 that was expected, and the interconvertibility of the two bond issues were the outstanding features that pleased financial circles here.

The bond market has been relieved from the prospect of a strain on the country's banking resources, by the size of the issue. The banks here and the Liberty Loan Committee feel that there will be no tremendous difficulty in floating the loan. The inter-convertibility of the 4¾ per cent. and 3¾ per cent. bonds, it was pointed out, will keep prices of the two issues on the market at the same level, since when one issue falls too low, the tendency will be to purchase bonds of that issue and convert them into bonds of the other.

The brief maturity of the notes is also designed to stabilize the market. If they sell below par, the discount has only four years, at most, to be amortized in. This is a feature of the utmost importance, bankers think. In some quarters yesterday it was said that the Victory bonds should sell slightly above par as soon as the offering is completed and the bonds are allowed to circulate in the open market.

Schiff Pleased by Terms.

Mortimer L. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. said yesterday that he looked for a great popular response to the Government's offering of the Victory bonds.

"The terms of the Victory Loan are such as to insure complete success of the offering," said Mr. Schiff. "The American people have met every call which has been made upon them, and would have done so in this instance, even if the terms of the new loan had been less attractive, but it is a great encouragement that a type of security should have been selected which is so advantageous an investment for the savings of the people, irrespective whether they are large or small. No one need hesitate to invest to the limit in the new notes, and I look for a great popular response.

"We must not be overconfident, however, and think that the task has become an easy one. Our efforts must be directed toward securing the largest possible distribution, and this requires an intensive campaign and securing of every possible buyer. The loan appeals to those of moderate and small means, as well as to those of larger incomes, and, with proper presentation of the facts and of its many attractive features, it should prove a fitting culmination of the contributions of the American people to the victory which our Allies and we have gained."

James S. Alexander, President of the National Bank of Commerce, predicted success for the loan, especially in view of the fact that as an investment it was nearly 100 per cent. perfect.

"The Secretary of the Treasury, in the exercise of the discretion vested in him by the Congress, has fixed terms of the Victory Liberty Loan which should prove satisfactory to all concerned," said Mr. Alexander. "He has, over a period of many weeks, sought the views of thoughtful and experienced men in every section of the country, and has given careful consideration to the innumerable suggestions made to him.

"The terms as announced represent a sound judgment, based on a complete understanding of the many and varied conditions which required to be considered. The interests of both the Government and of investors have been protected, and I predict enthusiastic and unremitting work on the part of Victory Liberty Loan workers everywhere, that this last loan may be a great success. The notes are attractive investments, and it is hoped that the number of subscribers may not be less than in the case of the preceding loan."

Sees Attraction for All Classes.

Walter E. Frew, President of the Corn Exchange Bank, said:

"The terms of the loan are such as will appeal to all classes of investors, large and small. The amount, the rate and the interchangeability of the conversion privilege, to say nothing of the character of the security itself, makes the loan, to my mind, one of the most ideal investments ever offered to the public. The amount asked for—considerably smaller than any of us had expected, with the assurance that this will be the last Liberty Loan—is very reassuring to all those now holding previous issues of Liberty bonds. It will not be long before the public will realize the importance of all these issues.

"From a purely investment standpoint, to those liable to pay the normal income tax, the 4¾ per cent. notes are equivalent to the individual of a 5 per cent. investment, and to corporations paying 10 per cent. normal tax they are equivalent to an investment yielding 5 per cent. The offering is most attractive and, I believe, the public will so consider it."

Alexander J. Hemphill, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Guaranty Trust Company, said:

"I am very agreeably surprised in the terms of the Victory Liberty Loan, which appear to be more favorable than we had been led to expect."

Secretary Glass came to New York yesterday to get in touch with officials of the loan organization here preparatory for his appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House tonight to discuss the loan. The Secretary had a long conference with Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank and Chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee of this district. In this talk with Governor Strong, Secretary Glass expressed himself as highly gratified at the reception Wall Street gave the terms of the Victory Loan.

"I am hopeful at the outlook for subscriptions," he said, "and I believe the issue will be oversubscribed."

Big Meeting Here Tonight.

While the Victory Loan campaign will not start officially in this district until next Monday, meetings are scheduled this afternoon and tonight at which plans for organization of the drive will be discussed. The largest meeting probably will be the one held at the Metropolitan Opera House, where Secretary Glass will be the main speaker. Here also, Governor Strong and Rear Admiral Sims will talk. Mayor Hylan will occupy one of the boxes.

In Brooklyn, at the Hotel Bossert, Lieut. Col. Roosevelt and Colonel Hayward will speak at a dinner and a conference on the loan, at which Charles A. Boody, Chairman of the Brooklyn Liberty Loan Committee, will preside. There also will be a meeting at the Hotel Astor during the afternoon, and meetings in several nearby cities of New Jersey.

Although the attractive features of the loan are expected to make the work of canvassing easier than might be expected, the Liberty Loan Committee is not neglecting anything in the way of bringing home to every American the real meaning of the Victory Loan. By means of posters and pageants, outdoor and indoor speechmaking, house-to-house canvassing, it will be made the most extensive advertisement campaign yet attempted for a Government bond issue.

A poster that is expected to appeal to a number of persons is the one designed for the Liberty Loan Committee here by Howard Chandler Christy, entitled "Americans All," the names being taken from the casualty lists issued by the Government. The picture is that of a girl placing a wreath at the head of a roll of dead. The names, with the nationalities they represent, are as follows: Du Bois, French; Smith, English; O'Brien, Irish; Cajka, Bohemian; Hauche, German; Pappandrikopolous, Greek; Andrassi, Hungarian; Villotto, Italian; Levy, Jew; Turovitch, Jugoslav; Kowalski, Polish; Chriczanevicz, Russian; Knutson, Scandinavian, and Gonzales, Spanish.

Urges Republicans to Aid Loan.

Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, has issued a statement urging "Republicans of national, State, county, city, and precinct organizations" to lay aside everything else and work for the success of the Victory Loan. His telegram addressed to the leaders all over the country follows:

"Our first duty as Republicans today is that duty which we never have and never will fail to anticipate and discharge—our duty as Americans. Just as during the war we determined our every act by how we could do most for effective action, so now we will measure our every step by how we can contribute most to the national welfare. To that end we will abandon all other activities to aid in the Victory Loan until its success has been accomplished.

"For this purpose let the Republican press and every man of Republican organizations enlist in the Victory Loan drive. The national, State, county, city, and precinct organizations of loyal working Republicans will enroll to a man in the service of the nation now."

BELGIANS HERE TO AID LOAN.

115 Veterans of the War Arrive on Rochambeau to Tour Country.

Among the 1,661 civil and military passengers arriving late yesterday from Havre on the French liner Rochambeau were 108 Belgian noncommissioned officers and men and seven officers who were sent over from Brussels to assist the United States Treasury Department in booming the coming Victory Loan. The men wore their trench helmets, and every one had at least two or more decorations and had been wounded in defending his native land.

The detachment consisted of 30 men of the 12th Regiment of the line, which defended Liège in the early days of the war, and carried its flag, which bore the names "Liège, Dixmude, Yser, Merckem, Stadenberg, and La Lys" upon it in gold letters. There were 30 grenadiers of the guard, 30 chasseurs, and 16 machine-gun men, called mitrailleuse, who had 10 fine Belgian police dogs with them, which were used to haul these light guns during the war. There were also 6 cavalry trumpeters and 3 buglers.

The Belgians went to the Hippodrome last night, and will start on a tour through the United States before joining the Victory Loan forces in New York. In addition to their Belgian decorations, many of the sunburned warriors wore decorations from France, Russia, England, Italy, and Serbia, and one soldier had a D. S. C. given to him by General Pershing.

GREAT NAVY FLEET SURPRISES CITY

the eighth ship in column, displayed the pennant of Rear Admiral Edward Eberle, recently relieved as Superintendent of Annapolis in order to assume a division command under Mayo.

Mayor Welcomes the Ships.

Notwithstanding its early arrival, the city authorities were able to welcome the fleet as it came into port. Down the bay the police boat Patrol, with Mayor Hylan and members of the Mayor's Committee of Welcome, saluted the flag of Admiral Mayo, after which, with the aid of megaphones, wigwag flags, and wireless, the Mayor extended the city's official welcome to the officers and men of the fleet. The Patrol by wireless informed Admiral Mayo that the city was ready to surrender to the fleet, and Admiral Mayo sent back in characteristic fashion the navy's thanks for the good time that he said he knew was ahead for every man, officer and enlisted, on the ships. The total personnel is in the neighborhood of 30,000.

At 1:10 P. M. the Mississippi was abreast of Seventy-second Street. Half an hour later she dropped her anchors off the Point, at about the same time that the Delaware slowed up and came to anchor off Fifty-fourth Street.

The submarines, ten of them, and all of them of the "O" type, came up the river just ahead of the dreadnoughts, and are now berthed on the Jersey side south of Fifty-ninth Street. They are all close inshore, and it is probable that within the next day or two the flotilla will be brought to the New York side and tied up alongside one of the city piers, probably the one at 135th Street. All of the submarines came from Guantanamo, and Admiral Mayo said that in the battle manoeuvres they had made a splendid record.

Swarm of Destroyers Here.

About thirty of the destroyers had arrived in port ahead of the main fighting units. Those "sea hornets" have been quietly slipping into the harbor for thirty-six hours, and the river to the north of 135th Street is dotted with the graceful, four-funneled little fighters, in one patch of water just to the south of Fort Washington Point twenty-eight destroyers, twenty of them new vessels of the flush-deck type, are at anchor. The others are anchored by groups, generally in column, all the way down the Jersey side of the river to a point off Eightieth Street. The destroyer flotillas are commanded by Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, the officer who won fame as a land fighter in the war, when he commanded the great naval 14-inch guns which fought under Foch in the last weeks of the struggle on the western front.

The destroyer tender Melville, the first American flagship to arrive in Europe, and in the first weeks after the arrival of the destroyers at Queenstown the flagship of Admiral Sims, is anchored off 150th Street, as is also the old cruiser Columbia, which was in the "Flying Squadron" in the Spanish war. Like the Melville, the Columbia is a "mother ship" to destroyers. The hospital ship Comfort and the transport Bridge are in the auxiliary column hidden from general view somewhere between Fort Washington Point and Spuyten Duyvil.

Mayo Tells of Manoeuvres.

After the flagship Pennsylvania had anchored off Ninety-sixth Street Admiral Mayo discussed the battle and target exercises recently concluded in Cuban waters.

"We have had a splendid season at Guantanamo," said the Admiral, "and our trip north was just as successful from a naval standpoint. On the way up we needed a certain brand of weather in order to vary our program, and so I ordered Father Gleason (the Fleet Chaplain) and his Chaplains to put on their 'praying tackle' and see to it that we got the kind we wanted. Well, I can say now that the Chaplains made good with a vengeance, for it was weather made to order, and I will tell you why a little later.

"At the Guantanamo base the fleet engaged in fleet manoeuvres, battle exercises, and target practice. The exercises were the most interesting of the kind in which the fleet has ever engaged. We learned a lot of new things in the war, and all this had to be taken into consideration. For instance, we have a new system of handling the ships now. In the old days we handled them as units, but now they are handled by divisions, and instead of manoeuvring from the ends, as was formerly the case, we now work from the centre.

"Again the air arm is now one of first importance in all navies, and the planes played a very important part in our exercises during our stay at the Winter base. The machines were launched from platforms erected forward on the Texas and Nevada, the airmen reporting back by wireless, sometimes from the air and sometimes from land stations. When operating at considerable distances from the main fleet the aviators often land and use shore stations.

"The value of the service rendered by the airmen cannot be overestimated. I should also point out that we used many balloons in our work this Winter and in one instance, that I recall, we kept the balloon in the air for more than two weeks. The balloons were of course used for observation purposes.

"As for target practice we did not expect to make any great record owing to the many changes that have taken place in our personnel. We had a great number of young enlisted men who were serving their first year in the navy and we were not expecting them to do the impossible right at the start. But here again we were due for a pleasant surprise and the record that was made was a very good one indeed. Prior to this year we had never in salvo firing been astraddle a target at distances of more than 20,000 yards. This year, however, firing by salvos and at a target 21,000 yards distant we were astraddle the target at the first salvo. I am not bragging but really that was very good.

"On the way to New York we utilized every minute of the voyage and yesterday after clearing Cape Hatteras we made some very interesting cruising tests. We started at a speed of 17 knots, then went to 19 knots and at 11 A. M. we were making 20½. By noon every ship was at full speed, the Pennsylvania exceeding 22 knots, and every ship going faster than she did on her original speed tests.

"I think that is about all that I can say just now. As for our visit here, we are all glad to be in New York again, and I know that everybody will have a good time. We will not parade. As a matter of fact we want to and expect to review New York ourselves, instead of New York having to take a day off and review us. I might add that the entire fleet is not here. Some of our ships are in the Gulf and others are busy, as you know, bringing our soldiers home from Europe."

Admiral Mayo said that there were 104 ships in the Hudson River. The fleet is made up of twelve superdreadnoughts, seventy destroyers, ten submarines, and twelve auxiliary craft, the latter including the tenders Columbia, Savannah, Rochester, and Melville. The Savannah is a converted German liner. The Savannah, Rochester, and Columbia are anchored in the dreadnought column. The anchorages of ships in the fleet so far as had been arranged yesterday, and the landing stages from which they may be reached by visitors are indicated in the following schedule issued from the flagship Pennsylvania:

Fleet Championships Awarded

While in Southern waters the sporting championships of the fleet were decided. The baseball championship was won by the Pennsylvania with a team that won every game. This team was captained by Maranville, a seaman gunner who in civil life is the shortstop of the Boston National League team. The team representing the cruiser Prairie was second, and that of the dreadnought Arkansas third in the pennant race.

In the rowing events the Battenburg Cup, which is the most prized of naval sporting trophies, was won by the Arizona, with the Arkansas second, and the Nevada third. The Dunlap Cup, which is the department trophy was won by the Oklahoma, with the Pennsylvania second, while the Thompson Cup was also won by the oarsmen from the Oklahoma, and the Pennsylvania was second in this race too. The Oklahoma also won the cup given to the fleet by the Colonial Dames, the New York pulling second in that race. The crew of the Nevada won the Neeser Cup, with the Pennsylvania second, while the San Pedro Cup was won by the Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvania had two crews in this race and captured second as well as first place.

20,000 Get Shore Leave.

Shore leave began as soon as the ships anchored yesterday, and last night 20,000 officers, bluejackets, and marines were seeing New York and having a good time. Today 10,000 of those at liberty last night will return to the ships and the third 10,000 will come ashore. In the cases of men living near New York furloughs to visit home will be issued during the two weeks the fleet is in New York.

The ships will be opened to visitors every day during the stay in New York waters. The visiting hours, during which all will be welcomed aboard any ship in the fleet, are from 2 to 5 in the afternoons.

The seven war work organizations which have been charged with the entertainment of the sailors and marines, announced their program yesterday. The program is practically the same for every day of the visit. That for today is as follows:

Sight-seeing trips, War Camp Community Service; free twenty-mile trips in buses and private cars, taking in points of interest in Manhattan; trips start from Ninety-sixth Street and Riverside Drive at 10 A. M., 2 P. M. and 2:45 P. M.; two buses will also leave Headquarters Unit No. 8, 55 West 27th Street.

Sight-seeing trips, Y. M. C. A.; buses will leave Eagle Hut, Sixth Avenue and Forty-second Street, at 2 P. M.

Sight-seeing trips, K. C.; buses will leave K. C. hut, Forty-sixth Street and Broadway, at 9:30 A. M.

Free tickets to matinees and evening shows; distributed by the W. C. C. S. at Red Circle Hut, Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue, and by the Navy Liaison Officer, Ninety-sixth Street and Riverside Drive.

Luncheon entertainment, Jewish Welfare Board at noon, 89 Park Avenue.

Dinner entertainment, J. W. B. at Y. M. H. A., Ninety-second Street and Lexington Avenue, 6 P. M., and at 89 Park Avenue, 6 P. M.; K. of C. at Longacre Square hut, Broadway and Forty-sixth Street, 4 to 6 P. M.

Dinner dances, J. W. B. at Seward Park Canteen, Essex and Canal Streets, 6 P. M.

Dinner, W. C. C. S. at Headquarters Unit No. 5, 55 West Twenty-seventh Street, 6 P. M.; League of Catholic Women, 154 East Thirty-eighth Street, 11:30 A. M. to 2:30 P. M., and at Cardinal Farley Club, 15 East Thirtieth Street, 5:30 to 9 P. M.

Dance, J. W. B. at the Academy, 115 West Seventy-ninth Street, with partners provided, at 8 P. M.

Service and dinner, J. W. B. at Y. M. H. A., 21 West 110th Street, and at Seward Park Canteen, at 6 P. M.

The Salvation Army will provide coffee and doughnuts at each landing station.

The American Library Association will place the latest magazines and books aboard the ships.

Tennis courts for officers of the fleet have been arranged as part of the fortnight's entertainment planned by the War Work Organizations. The War Camp Community Service has made arrangements whereby the tennis courts at Ninety-fifth Street and West End Avenue will be turned over to the officers on April 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 28, 29, and 30. The Knights of Columbus have agreed to provide all the equipment needed, in the way of racquets, balls, and nets. Naval officers wishing to use these tennis courts should apply at the Riverside Community House, Ninety-seventh Street and Riverside Park.

If We All Pull Together—

GERMANY said we couldn't raise an army—but we did. Germany said we couldn't transport that army across three thousand miles of ocean and through the U-Boat zone—but we did.

Germany said we couldn't train and equip that army in time to get into the fight—but we turned the tide of a victorious march on Paris, and won the war, won it months sooner than anyone believed possible—

Because the nation turned its whole thought and energy to winning the war, because every man and woman in America came forward freely to offer his and her time, dollars and effort to the great common purpose.

Today we are facing a new trial—and a new opportunity.

And some men say that we cannot realize the era of prosperity that lies almost within our grasp, with its increase in industry and trade, its good wages and employment for all.

But we can—if we all pull together. A nation united in a common purpose wins victories of peace as well as victories of war.

But the first step is to finish the job we have on hand, so that we can turn all our energies freely to the tasks ahead.

START BLOCK TEST TO LOWER RENTS

Statistics to be Gathered in 25 City Squares by Reconstruction Commission.

COURTS AID MANY TENANTS

Families Are Driven to Cellars, Declares Mrs. Moskowitz, Member of State Reconstruction Board.

Profiteering in rent in New York City was attacked yesterday from two angles. The Housing Committee of the State Reconstruction Committee with the cooperation of more than twenty civic welfare agencies and settlement houses, began a thoroughgoing survey into the housing situation in twenty-five blocks, characteristic of tenement sections in the city, embracing both wage earners and salaried persons having fixed small incomes. The information gained in the survey will be collated with facts concerning building operations, taxes, mortgages and similar matters, which are being sought from owners of buildings and real estate operators. The aim of the committee is to ascertain, so far as is possible, the fundamental causes that have led to the present conditions, in order that a unified program of permanent relief may be presented to the Legislature and to the public.

The Housing Committee of the State Reconstruction Committee also requests those who have complaints to make concerning high rentals to send their names with full details, in affidavit form preferably, to the committee's office in Room 309 of the Hall of Records.

In order immediately to ameliorate the condition of individuals who have been the victims of rent profiteers, the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering organized yesterday and announced that, beginning on Thursday, complaints will be received by mail or in person at Room 1,200 in the Municipal Building. Inspectors of the city departments, all of which will co-operate, it was said, will be assigned to ascertain all the facts leading to these complaints. The weapon of publicity will be used to combat profiteers, but no hardship will be visited on reputable landlords.

In outlining the work of the Housing Committee of the State Reconstruction Committee, Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, the Secretary, said that the committee has already learned that the rapid rise in rents has forced families to lower their standard of living and move into cellars, a condition that has not obtained in New York in some years. Families in better circumstances have been obliged to take boarders, she added, as well as to move into fewer rooms.

"They pay as high as $7 to $10 a room in cellars, and they are glad to get them," Mrs. Moskowitz continued. "Men who have been in the habit of paying $16 a month rent, we find, have to pay $25 in some cases, and they are unable to do so, as their wages have not increased in proportion.

"The housing situation is really the most disturbing fact we have to face in New York, more disturbing than the employment situation, though that is serious. The actual condition is such that it is driving the people's standard of living down. There is no building at the present time. Of course, what is called fancy building, high-class apartment houses, will go on, but that does not take care of the industrial population. The ramifications of this situation are such that, if there is not relief soon, the industrial progress of the city will be retarded."

As indicating the state of the building situation, Mrs. Moskowitz pointed out that the estimated construction of new buildings in 1916 amounted to $191,000,000; [illegible] was only $35,000,000.

In making complaints to the Housing Committee, request is made that the following questions be answered:

1. Name and address of tenant.
2. Rent paid in previous years and in present year.
3. Amount and number of increases from Jan. 1, 1918, to present time.
4. Number of rooms, location of apartment.
5. Present condition of upkeep of your apartment. Sanitation, service, hot water, heat, repairs, &c.
6. Name of the landlord or owner.
7. Is he resident of the city or not.
8. Is your house in the hands of an agent or a lessee.

The card used in the housing canvass by the committee called for additional information, including the number of persons in the apartment, the number of boarders, the occupation of the members of the family, and whether the apartment is in the cellar or basement.

Mrs. Moskowitz said that the survey is being made of apartments that formerly paid rental of from $40 down. It is hoped that the survey will be completed in about two weeks and that an additional week will suffice for analyzing the information in order to draw up recommendations to the Legislature.

Some of the facts desired from the landlords and renting agents are the cost of operation, cost of repairs, increased cost of materials, increased taxes, together with other facts, going back over a period of five years, so that a fair statement of the case may be presented.

On Friday at 4 P. M. the Advisory Committee of the Housing Committee will meet in order to discuss immediate remedies in the matter of the bills before the State Legislature.

Members of the Mayor's Committee, of which Mr. Hirsch is the head, met in Mr. Hirsch's office yesterday. This committee includes Peter J. Brady, Edward J. Hannah, Rev. A. Ray Petty, and Henry Bloch. Mr. Hirsch announced yesterday the receipt of letters promising co-operation from Henry Bruckner, Borough President of the Bronx; Jacob A. Cantor, of the Department of Taxes and Assessments; Acting Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson, and Commissioner of Accounts David Hirschfield.

Outlining the action contemplated by the committee, Mr. Brady said that the committee desired the co-operation of the churches, settlement workers, labor unions, and individuals, in order that all the information might be sifted and weighed. It was suggested and agreed that the committee attempt to have the assessments raised on property where there was a clear case of profiteering, on the ground that if the landlord insisted on mulcting the public the city was entitled to more taxes from him. Chairman Hirsch declared that the strongest weapon the committee could have was publicity of bona fide profiteering cases reported.

FIGHT PRICE-FIXING PLAN.

Publishers' Association Favors Youker Bill to End Abuses.

A spirited fight is expected in the New York Assembly when the Youker bill again comes up for consideration. This bill purposes to extend to articles of trade, commerce or manufacture the principle of prohibiting the fixing of prices by combination or agreement on articles or commodities of common use. According to its backers, the extension of the principle will safeguard the pocketbook of every member of the "ultimate consumer" class.

One of the applications of the measure, it is pointed out, is in the case of labor unions, which, while negotiating to increase wages, make compacts with employers by which the price to the consumer shall be increased to a fixed amount. This, it is pointed out, pinches neither the employer nor the employe—only the ultimate consumer. While the wage of the worker is increased, the consumer pays the bill.

Assemblyman Youker's bill, which he describes as intended to prevent such practices, has been read to the Assembly and referred to the Rules Committee and Mr. Youker expects to make application tomorrow or later this week to have it reported back to the session. Among those who are fighting for its passage are the members of the Publishers' Association, because of the attempts of the Photo-Engravers' Union, while demanding higher wages, to dictate the prices that photo-engraving concerns should charge to their customers. The Photo-Engravers' Union, on the other hand, is vigorously opposed to the passage of the bill, and one of their representatives recently called on the attorneys of the Publishers' Association and announced that labor unions were going to fight the bill to a finish and had plenty of money for such purpose.

Saying that similar practices could be extended to manufacture generally, and in this way directly affect the cost of living, the Publishers' Association attorneys have issued a statement explaining the nature of the measure designed to combat it.

The statement calls attention to a new development of "unionism" that has recently taken place in England, referring to a new organization which has chosen as its name "The Middle Class Union." Finding that after vigorous fights between the labor groups and their employers the result often was that the great middle class, composed of persons whose incomes were comparatively stationary, had to pay the bill, members of this class abroad got up a union of their own to keep an eye on their interests in these fights in which they had so often found themselves very disinterested neutrals without a voice.

"The time is fast coming here," according to the statement, "when the consuming public will have to organize to protect itself in the same way."

Wage Increases by Director Hines.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Wage increases averaging about $15 a month for approximately 60,000 employes of the American Railway Express Company were announced tonight by Director General Hines. The increase represents an advance of $25 a month over the wage scale in effect Jan. 1, 1918. The Director General also raised the wages of 12,000 sleeping and parlor car employes an additional $12.50 a month. Wages of 10,000 dining car employes were advanced $25 above the basic monthly minimum in effect Jan. 1, 1918. This will yield approximately $8 a month.

DENIES 77TH MEN OBJECT TO PARADE

Capt. Renshaw Issues Statement Saying Troops Count on Marching as a Division.

JOBS FOR 3,500 ALREADY

Major Weaver Lauds Co-operation Extended by Jewish Employers in Providing for Men.

Captain Alfred E. Renshaw, former adjutant of the 302d Engineers, issued a statement yesterday in which he declared that the men of New York's 77th Division were unanimous for a divisional parade. He said in part:

"I wish to correct an impression that seems to prevail to the effect that the men of the division do not wish to parade. On the contrary, they have been looking forward for a long time to a parade in which the entire division will take part as a unit. It is the tangible reward for the year's service that they have had in France, and I think it would be most shortsighted and an injustice to the men if this opportunity to parade before the city which they represented abroad were not permitted. I also feel that the families of these men will take it most keenly if the division, of which they are proud, is demobilized without a parade."

Major S. Fullerton Weaver, who was sent by Major Gen. Alexander to the United States to seek employment for the men, said yesterday that the employment bureau of the division, at 280 Madison Avenue, was ready to provide work for the men as soon as they landed. In discussing the work of the employment bureau, Major Weaver said:

"The results thus far are most encouraging. Of the 5,600 men in the division for whom jobs are wanted, about 3,500 have been taken care of. As soon as the division returns from France it is our intention to establish another 77th Division Employment Bureau at Camp Upton, or wherever the men may be ordered pending demobilization. This bureau also is to be operated as a branch of the Government service. When the men reach camp white cards will be distributed to them by their company commanders. These cards are to show the name of the employer who has agreed to hire that particular man. At the same time blue cards will be sent to 600 men in the division who are employers of labor and who have said that they would hire from one to five soldiers of the 77th Division.

Lieut. Col. Douglas Campbell of the advance party of the 77th Division went to Camp Mills yesterday to make arrangements for the comfort of the men when they reach the cantonment. He announced yesterday that Captain A. W. Aub of the 505th Aero Squadron had been detailed to the office of the Mayor's Committee of Welcome in the Hall of Records. The present headquarters in the Biltmore will be continued.

A new auxiliary composed of the relatives and friends of the Divisional Headquarters and Headquarters Troops is to be formed tonight at a meeting in the Washington Irving High School. Mrs. Howland Davis, wife of Major Davis of Divisional Headquarters, and Mrs. George W. Brett, wife of Captain Brett of the Headquarters Troop, are leaders in the organization.

A meeting will also be held tonight in the Washington Irving High School under the auspices of the 306th Infantry Auxiliary. Major Archibald Thatcher and Swift Tarbell, a Y. M. C. A. worker recently returned from overseas, will speak.

6,433 MORE TROOPS ARRIVE.

The first contingent of American troops that fought in Italy on the Piave, arrived yesterday from Genoa by the Italian liner Duca d'Aosta, named after the leader under whom these soldiers had fought in September and October, 1918. Part of the 1,749 American officers and men on the troopship were from the 332d Infantry of the 83d Division, and were under command of Colonel William Wallace of Indianapolis, son of a former Governor of Indiana, and a nephew of General Lew Wallace.

General Emilio Guglielotti, Military Attaché at the Italian Embassy, with his staff, and the Italian Consul, Romolo Tritoni, were at the pier at the foot of West Fifty-seventh Street to arrange with Colonel Wallace for the presentation of a gold medal to the regiment on behalf of the Italian residents in New York.

By next Monday the entire regiment will be in New York and will be paraded by Colonel Wallace. Thirty-five more officers and 1,245 men will arrive this morning on the Canopic from Genoa, and the remainder, twenty-eight officers and 687 men, will get here tomorrow or Thursday on the Dante Alighieri.

One of the military passengers on the Duca d'Aosta was Count Dentice di Frasso, on his way to Washington on an official mission. He married a daughter of Mrs. Henry Siegel of this city. The Count, who is a Colonel of cavalry, was Military Attaché at Petrograd ad witnessed the rise of the Bolsheviki, who kept him a prisoner for twenty-two days. He said 2,500 prisoners were locked in cells fit for 800 at the most, and each day men were taken out by the Red Guards and shot.

Lieut. Col. Philip van Ingen of 125 East Seventy-first Street, who has been ten months in France and Italy with the 331st Field Hospital, also returned.

The American transport Plattsburg arrived yesterday with 2,269 troops and thirty-seven soldiers' brides, as well as ten sailors' wives with five children, from Brest.

The troops on board were the 409th Telegraph Battalion, 406th and 497th Aero Squadrons, 16th Aero Construction Company, 851st Transportation Company, fourteen casual companies, and convalescent details from Brest and Liverpool.

The transports Edward Luckenbach and Carrillo, from Brest, and the Canopic, from Italy, will dock this morning, according to the radio messages received last night.

The French liner Rochambeau arrived last night from Havre with 76 casual officers and 600 troops, mostly casual companies.

"FIGHTING 69TH" IS DUE ON HARRISBURG SUNDAY

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The sailing of nine transports from France was announced today by the War Department. One of the vessels, the von Steuben, which is due at New York April 19, has aboard the Headquarters Band of the American Expeditionary Forces, composed of three officers and 101 men, which is being sent home to aid in the Victory Liberty Loan campaign. Aboard another of the transports, the Harrisburg, due at New York April 20, is a detachment of the 165th Infantry, formerly the 69th New York National Guard of the Rainbow Division.

The transport Santa Teresa, from Bordeaux for New York, due April 24, has aboard Headquarters and Companies B and C of the 11th Engineers and a large number of casuals, including fourteen convalescent groups from the Bordeaux center.

ARTHUR SHATTUCK
The Great American Pianist
Makes Record Rolls exclusively for the DUO-ART PIANO

In the opinion of the prominent critics and in the regard of America's concert-going public, the pianism of Arthur Shattuck ranks high. This gifted American plays with all the brilliance and finesse of the Old-World masters. Yet in temperament and in spirit Shattuck is typically American.

Arthur Shattuck gives a recital (his last here this season) on the evening of April 17th at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Hear Shattuck in person and then come to Aeolian Hall and hear how perfectly The Duo-Art reflects all the delightful characteristics of his art. The record-rolls of Paderewski, Hofmann, Bauer, Powell, Shattuck, or those of the other great pianists will also be played at your request.

The Duo-Art Pianola Piano is obtainable in the Steinway, Steck, Stroud and the renowned Weber. In addition to its extraordinary ability to reproduce the actual performance of pianists, the Duo-Art is a piano of unequalled excellence for hand-playing and a Pianola of advanced design, whereby a perfect piano technique is provided for those who have not learned keyboard playing.

MEN DEFER ACTION ON B. R. T. STRIKE

Mayor Sends Letter to Union Saying Garrison Will Receive a Deputation.

Workers Not Sure He Will Meet Union Heads They Will Send to See Receiver Today.

At the meeting of unionized employes of the B. R. T. at Arcadia Hall, Brooklyn, last night, that, according to union announcement, was to decide whether they would go on strike today, a letter from Mayor Hylan was read from the platform which deferred the strike decision for one more day. This letter indicated an about-face on the part of Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the B. R. T., in the attitude he had previously taken toward the threatening strikers, in refusing to confer with members of the Amalgamated Union.

As a result of the letter the 3,500 workers present voted to send a Committee of Sixteen, empowered to declare a strike, if need be, to confer with Mr. Garrison today. It was also decided to hold another mass meeting at Arcadia Hall tonight to receive the report of this Committee of Sixteen, which comprises the original members of the union Executive Committee.

The Mayor's letter, which arrived by special messenger while last night's strike meeting was in session, follows:

Office of the Mayor.
New York, April 14.

To the members of the committee: William Riley, Aaron Kopman, and Arnold Willer:

I am inclosing herewith a letter from Mr. Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, in answer to a letter of mine requesting that the B. R. T. lines meet with you as a committee representing the employes of their system.

You will, no doubt, note in Mr. Garrison's letter that he states you never requested a conference with him. Also that he never refused to see you. From Mr. Garrison's letter it would appear that he is perfectly willing to meet with the employes' representatives.

I therefore suggest that you select a committee of employes to see Mr. Garrison, and I am quite sure that it will be agreeable to him to discuss working conditions of the employes of that system.

JOHN F. HYLAN.

The attitude of the workers at the meeting was belligerent despite their final decision to postpone their final strike decision until another meeting tonight. When Peter J. O'Brien, Vice President of the Amalgamated, who presided, asked if the meeting wanted to reconsider its vote of two weeks ago empowering the Executive Committee to call a strike there were vigorous cries of "No!"

Committeeman O'Brien quieted the meeting and told the men that the Mayor's proposal could not be ignored and that other people had to be considered. It was then that the letter was read to the meeting and the suggestion made that a committee of sixteen be sent to confer with Mr. Garrison today. In the event that Mr. Garrison refused to meet this committee after all, however, it was said that a strike would be called without fail at tonight's meeting.

Some misgivings were held as to whether Mr. Garrison had really meant to reverse his position, and consequently as to whether he would receive the Executive Committee today, as, it was pointed out, the letter from him to the Mayor that was made public Saturday stated that he would see representatives of the workmen, but did not then appear to reverse his attitude toward dealing with representatives of the union. The sixteen who will call on him today are members of the union.

Chairman O'Brien also read a cablegram to the meeting which he said had been sent during the day to President Wilson asking him to intervene and prevent the strike.

While the other employes of the B. R. T. were in session at Arcadia Hall the local of the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen held a meeting in Triangle Hall, a block from the other gathering. After long debate the signalmen, all employes of the B. R. T., voted to have a committee wait upon Mr. Garrison this morning. It was announced that if Mr. Garrison refused to meet this committee the signalmen would go out on strike, independent of any action to be taken by the Amalgamated men.

The company claimed a partial victory over the Amalgamated yesterday afternoon, when it was announced that the shopmen had sent a petition to the receiver asking for a conference regarding their working conditions and wages. Mr. Garrison presided at a conference of the officers and operating officials at the company offices yesterday, and it was learned later that the company considered itself ready to meet any emergency.

ORPHANS TO SEE CIRCUS.

Monday Morning Performance Will Be Given for Children.

The performance given each year for the benefit of the orphans of New York by the circus will take place in Madison Square Garden next Monday morning. The Ringling Brothers announced last night that the entire Garden will be given over to the orphans. They ask the matrons and Superintendents of all orphan homes in Greater New York to communicate at once by letter (do not use phone) with "Secretary, Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus, Madison Square Garden," and let him know the number of orphans the home cares for.

In years past an afternoon has been set aside for the pleasure of the children, but advance sales are so large that it has been impossible to hold out accommodations for all the orphans, and it is the desire of the circus management that no orphan shall be slighted.

venience which affords an opportunity for juggling statistics at the station houses, as I have been informed, and because of the abolition of the Bureau of Statistics.

"The Police Commissioner published in his report a glowing table showing 'economies' as the result of not filling vacancies in the civilian force at police headquarters. As a matter of fact, in numerous instances policemen have been detailed to perform the work of civilians who resigned or were forced out so that favored policemen, who should be doing actual police work, could be given soft berths under shelter. This is not only a decided unfairness toward the policemen who do patrol duty, but withdraws just so many policemen—some of them officers of police benevolent associations—from work on the prevention and detection of crime and the catching of criminals when crime in the city is manifestly rampant.

"The Commissioner said in his report that certain civilian positions had not been filled. Although civilians are not in these places, numerous policemen are. Among them are Policemen Benjamin Tighe, William T. Major, John J. Lang, Michael Cleary, (Secretary-Treasurer of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association,) Bernard J. Lester, Matthew J. McCann, Martin Walsh, George P. Oback, and Thomas J. Armstrong, each receiving $1,650 a year, as first grade patrolmen. Also there are James Nemetz, second grade patrolman, at $1,500, and Lieutenant John A. Park, at $2,450.

"In each and every one of the above-named cases the police salary is greater than that paid to the civilian who was replaced. The group of eleven above shows, on an annual basis, a salary total of $18,800, thus exposing the false claim of economy, since this cost is $6,744 more than the corresponding civilian payroll had been. There are other cases, of course, which were not in the report, as for instance Policemen George Bazler, Hubman, and Charles J. Hoffman, first-grade patrolmen, at $1,650 each, and Lieutenant William F. Brennan, at $2,450, an officer of the Police Lieutenants' Benevolent Association. These four represent an increase of $3,140 over the payroll of the civilians they replaced. And there are other cases too."

It was admitted by officials at Police Headquarters last night that Commissioner Enright had done away with the system of writing complaints and reports in books and had substituted a system of writing them on separate cards, which could be put together or kept apart, preserved or destroyed, as the police authorities saw fit.

Efforts to get a statement last night from either Commissioner Enright or Mayor Hylan were not successful.

DRAMA

Crook Comedy in Costume.

THE BONDS OF INTEREST, a comedy in a prologue and three acts; translated from the Spanish of Jacinto Benavente by John Garrett Underhill. At the Garrick Theatre.

|---|---|
| Dona Sirena | Helen Westley |

| Pantaloon | Leon Cunningham |
| Risela | Mary Blair |
| Innkeeper | C. Hooper Trask |
| Leander | Rollo Peters |
| Secretary | Paul Lane |
| Crispin | Augustin Duncan |
| Maid | Beatrice Wood |

The Theatre Guild is an association largely made up of people who were members of the Washington Square Players. Last night it took over the Garrick Theatre, presenting a three-act comedy from the Spanish of Jacinto Benavente, and in all probability scored a notable popular success. The play is in costume, and it introduces the traditional Harlequin, Columbine and Polichinelle; but the story it tells is as worldly wise and modern as the latest crook play—and it is infinitely better told and more witty than most. It has, in fact, an appeal as general as that of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," which it resembles in many ways.

The bonds of interest which give the play its title are the bonds which unite the necessitous against people of wealth—especially if they also are crooked. A pair of adventurers—clever and sympathetic fellows they are—arrive in a seventeenth century town, pursued by justice and with only the clothes on their backs. The master is a Spanish gentleman, whose aspirations at least are noble, and his servant is a volatile Sancho Panza. By dint of clever affrontery the servant, Crispino, gains lodging at the inn and becomes patron or accomplice to all the clever deadbeats of the community. His plot is to marry his master to the daughter and heiress of Polichinelle, and, by presenting a united front, the old curmudgeon is at last overborne.

The delicate point in crook comedy is always the love interest. Benavente has managed the story of his hero and heroine in a way that may well arouse admiration among the masters of the craft on Broadway. Though the play is not primarily romantic, the Spanish genius for impassioned adventure is abundantly manifest. The Leander of Rollo Peters, (who, by the way is also director of the company and designer of scenery and costumes,) is a strikingly handsome figure, sympathetic and persuasive in every moment—a true Castilian.

The wit and satire of the play centres in the servant Crispin, in whom the genius of Sancho Panza blends with that of the designing valets of Terence and Molière. His philosophy of swagger and bluff, based on a shrewd knowledge of average human nature, would delight George M. Cohan, and Crispin has besides a streak of ambition and independence which lends dignity to his most cynical shift. Many of his lines are as admirably wise as they are satiric. As played by Augustin Duncan (lately the Great Ancestor in "The Betrothal") the part falls short, perhaps, of the true Latin lightness and fluidity, but the fellow is keen and resourceful always, with abundant wit and animal spirits.

Helen Westley is Dona Sirena, a sort of Spanish Becky Sharp living in splendor on nothing a year. Her performance is a delight of character comedy tempered by admirable artistic discretion. Henry Herbert plays a Doctor of Law, and very ably interprets a caricature of mediaeval justice as delightful as was the caricature of mediaeval medicine in Anatol France's farce, "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife." The rest of the cast verge toward the more amateurish level of the Washington Square Players, but their amateurism is touched always with imagination and the instinct of true quality.

The three scenes are rich in color, and the latter two of them in atmospheric suggestion. The costumes are truly splendid. Those of the ladies are of the hobby-horse crinoline order made familiar by the Velasquez Infanta, and lent a quaint distinction to the comedy.

Unless all signs fail, an artistic coterie production has at last achieved popular success.

GAS KILLS MRS. HOADLEY.

Lawyer's Wife Found Dead in Home —Police Say Accident.

Mrs. Fannie C. Hoadley, wife of Joseph H. Hoadley, of the firm of Hoadley, Lauterbach & Johnson, 22 William Street, was found dead yesterday morning in a gas-filled room in her home at 18 East Eighty-second Street. Gas was escaping from a single jet in the chandelier. The police said her death was accidental.

Mr. Hoadley, when his wife did not come to breakfast, sent a Japanese servant to call her. The man discovered Mrs. Hoadley's body. Dr. John A. Burke of 149 West Forty-eighth Street, the family physician, who was summoned, agreed that the case was purely an accidental one.

Dr. Burke said last night that, from his investigation, it appeared that Mrs. Hoadley had two gas jets burning in her room on Sunday night, and in turning out the lights had partly turned one of the jets on again by mistake.

No word of the death was sent to the police or to the Medical Examiner until after 8 o'clock last night, according to the police. An undertaker, when he learned the cause of death, notified the Medical Examiner.

25,000 OF OUR DEAD IN ONE CEMETERY

Bodies Are Being Assembled by 10,000 Negro Troops at Romagne.

LARGEST OF GRAVEYARDS

Located in the Argonne Sector, Where Our Army Had the Hardest Fighting.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERDUN, April 14.—America's largest military cemetery in France is at Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, some thirty kilometers north of Verdun. There 25,000 of our dead are being assembled. The work is being done by 10,000 negro troops, labering at top speed to complete the task by July 1, after which no bodies may be moved under the provisions of French law.

It is natural that the biggest cemetery of America's fallen should be in the Argonne sector, for there we had the hardest battle and lost the most men. It was on a long line running just north of Romagne that the American First Army fought its heart-testing battle in the last two weeks of October, when no ground was gained and no cities were won, but when the strength was sapped out of the crack German divisions which Ludendorff had sent to teach a lesson to the audacious Americans.

In an area of ten square kilometers in the region of the Freya Stellung 17,000 American dead were buried, by far the heaviest losses we had in the war. Those men fell before Landres and Landres-St. George's, about Chatillon Hill and in the Bantheville Wood.

In this one cemetery will be buried two-thirds of all the American soldiers killed in France. The work now going on consists of digging up the bodies from places where they were buried just after the fighting, placing them in coffins and reburying them in the great field. Registration has fixed the location, generally each dead soldier being recorded on a slip of paper with figures locating his body. However, in many cases two or more soldiers were buried in one grave, and these cases necessitate some work in identification by means of the tags the soldiers wore about their necks. No soldier was finally buried without exhausting every effort to determine his identity.

Officers in charge say that the negro troops take the work good naturedly, but under no circumstances will work there after nightfall. I understand that the task will be completed before the end of June. At Beaumont, also in this sector, is a smaller cemetery of 800 graves and over. At Thiaucourt, in the St. Mihiel sector, is another, which will contain 3,200 graves.

SAMOANS WANT TO JOIN US.

New Zealand Rule in Former German Possession Opposed.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TUTUILA, April 14.—Natives and white residents of former German Samoa deeply resent the proposed New Zealand mandate and ask for a plebiscite, asserting that the record of four years of misrule and anti-American oppression is well known in Washington through consular reports.

The censorship here is strict and the press is gagged against any discussions unfavorable to New Zealand's aspirations. Immediate attention is declared to be imperative to prevent the handing of the islands over to incapables. Samoans wish incorporation with American Samoa and early departure of the New Zealanders.

Wilson Thanks Frank Hitchcock.

PARIS, April 14.—President Wilson sent for Frank Hitchcock today to thank him for his co-operation in advancing the League of Nations idea, especially with reference to the Monroe Doctrine amendment.

MAY TAKE LIQUOR THROUGH DRY STATE

That Is Not Taking It "Into" State, Supreme Court Holds —Hoarding Illegal.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Liquor may be transported through a dry State, even if it is going into dry territory, under a decision by the United States Supreme Court today, the opinion being handed down by Chief Justice White. This decision to that extent overrides the Reed bone dry amendment.

At the same time the court held, in an opinion handed down by Associate Justice Brandeis, that liquor hoarded before a dry law is passed is not legally held. This decision is applicable to States having in their dry laws sections forbidding storing liquor.

The case involving the Reed law was that of Homer Gudger of North Carolina. He was going from Baltimore to Asheville, N. C. The train stopped at Lynchburg, Va. He was arrested and a search of his suitcase revealed that he had seven or eight quarts of whisky. In Federal Court he was acquitted. The case was appealed. The Federal Court, which acquitted him on the ground that liquor is not "transported into" a State, if it is actually being taken "through" that State, was sustained.

In the case affecting the hoarding of liquor, Andrew Barbour of Georgia was convicted June 10, 1916, of having more than one gallon of vinous liquor in his possession. On May 1, 1915, Georgia passed a law against this, and the law became effective May 1, 1916. Barbour said he obtained the liquor before May 1, 1916. He contended that under the Fourteenth Amendment, which provides that property cannot be taken without due process of law, his liquor could not be taken from him.

Justice Brandeis's opinion stated that the point made by Barbour that he acquired the liquor before the prohibition law became effective would not hold; that a person accumulating liquor must realize that, with the lapse of time, the holding of the stock would become a crime. He said:

"Whoever acquires, after the enactment of the statute, property thus declared noxious, takes it with full notice of its infirmity, and that after a day certain its possession will, by mere lapse of time, become a crime."

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Legal advisers of Government agencies interested in liquor regulations examined statutes and executive orders today without finding specific legal authority by which the Internal Revenue Bureau might enforce wartime prohibition after July 1.

President Wilson, under the Overman act, giving him power to transfer functions from one department to another, might delegate the authority to the Revenue Bureau, some lawyers declared. However, this still would leave the bureau without adequate funds to pay the costs of maintaining a large Federal police force, unless there is some legislation at an early special session of Congress.

Suggestions received today did not materially change the air of uncertainty over the question of how prohibition is to be enforced after July 1, as caused by Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper's announcement that his bureau had not the authority nor the funds to carry out the enforcement measures properly.

Caruso in "Carmen."

Judging from last night this will be gala, as well as final, week at the Metropolitan Opera House. "Carmen" for the last time was offered to the regular Monday night subscribers with Enrico Caruso as a vocal bonne bouche to lend variety to a familiar cast; it was a "first time" this season for the popular tenor as Don José. Needless to add that the audience was a bumper one and more enthusiastic than a thousand claques. And, oddly enough, the official palm-beaters took a furlough and "they never would be missed." Caruso was in mellowest of voices, and to have heard him sing the Romance and the second act duo with Carmen is something to remember. There was plenty of him, physically speaking, encased within his natty uniform, but at least his emonpoint did not cast a shadow. (O antipasto, Jettatura!) In a word, he was a handsome young officer who sang like a well-fed angel and acted with due dramatic fire. After "Carmen je t'aime" the outburst was so spontaneous, so prolonged, that repetition seemed inevitable. It would have been deserved. The aria was most eloquently delivered.

Geraldine Farrar has toned down the truculence of her first act quarrel, and this is well. She was in excellent voice, and let herself go in the finales, taking a top C like the bravest of tenors. She rather underdressed the part possibly for the sake of the dazzling costume climax at the end when she is a radiant vision. Marie Sundellius proved a charming Micaela. What pleasure it is to hear the rather pallid music allotted to the hapless young person sung with such admirable art as sweet Marie's.

Clarence Whitehill's Escamillo is as vivid and powerful as if painted by Zuloaga. He, too, was in voice, and the Toreador song stirring. The Scherzo-quintet went with spirit. Farrar, Formichi, Sparkes, Ananian, Reiss. Last, though far from least, Galli, El divina Rodina, danced a poem full of seductive ellipses, parallelograms, rhomboids, and curved angles—yes, she defied geometry and its professors—as she sailed across the skyline, made a bewildering blur of perspectives, sent to sleep all notion of penitential consciences, and—then she did it all over again. The world would be a rather drab place without Rosina of the Galli. Leon Rothier was a tower of strength as Zuniga and Mario Laurenti the Morales. The chorus and ballet were all they should have been, and Pierre Monteux was at the conductor's helm. During curtain calls there was a battle of flowers. All the principals were flowery.

Sing American Compositions.

A concert of American composit ons, sung by the women's chorus of the Schumann Club, with John Powell as solo pianist and Rodney Saylor, accompanist, drew an interested audience last evening in Aeolian Hall. Among the choral pieces were "To the Spirit of Music," by P. R. Stephens, the conductor; "The House and the Road," W. F. Harling, and two Kentucky mountain airs, arranged by Brockway. For the first time here the club gave H. R. Spear's "The Island"; Deems Taylor's "Chambered Nautilus," reset for women's voices, and some admirable negro "Spirituals" arranged by F. T. Burleigh. Mr. Powell was heard in his own variation and double fugue, and others by D. G. Mason and MacDowell.

STADIUM CONCERTS AGAIN.

Arnold Volpe to Resume Summer Season at City College June 30.

Summer concerts in the Stadium are to be resumed under the direction of Arnold Volpe, as announced at a meeting yesterday at the home of Adolph Lewisohn, 881 Fifth Avenue. It was Mr. Lewisohn who gave the open air arena to the City College, and who provided funds for Mr. Volpe's concerts there last year. In order that these may become a permanent feature in New York's musical life it is now planned to hold eight weeks of concerts, beginning June 30 next.

Those at yesterday's meeting with Mr. Lewisohn were Robert Erskine Ely of the League for Political Education, Everett Dean Martin of the People's Institute, Arnold Volpe, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Andreas de Segurola, and Alfred F. Seligsberg.

VICTORY FOR THE VICTORY LOAN.

Secretary GLASS has risen to his opportunity, and makes proposals calculated to close the Liberty Loan series as brilliantly as it began. With the country as rich and sound as it is, his task was rather delicate than difficult. His predecessors had used all the inducements there were to offer in both tax exemptions and rising rates of interest. Each of the four preceding loans had successively offered either fuller exemptions or higher interest, and yet each of the loans had fallen to a discount. No issue could offer fuller exemption than the first. No issue could hope to be floated at par by an increase of interest without putting burdens on the Treasury not consistent with the public interest. There was the greater objection that an excessive interest rate would depress the outstanding issues beyond prudent limits.

The Secretary has met these obstacles by evading them, so to speak. That is to say, he raised the interest a trifle, a mere quarter of 1 per cent. on the most fully tax-exempt issue and one-half of 1 per cent. on the less exempt, and made the issues interconvertible; the subscribers can take their choice. As a welcome surprise he reduced the amount he was expected to ask for, and announced that oversubscriptions would not be accepted. Every loan thus far has been oversubscribed, and it is a safe prediction that this one will be. The loan would have been taken if the terms were even less inviting, and there is nothing to discuss but the details.

How skillfully the Secretary steered past his obstacles appears from the trifling effect of his announcement on the prices of the outstanding issues. As expected, the first issue declined. The obvious reason is that an issue bearing interest below the market rate for the sake of the exemption privilege is valuable in proportion to the shortness of the term for which the sacrifice of interest must be made and the length of the term for which the exemption will run. The rates of taxation are sure to fall before the maturity of the First Liberty Loan, and release from interest obligations will then tend to depress them further. It may almost be said that the low rate exempt notes and bonds are as surely due for an unfavorable movement of their quotations as the higher rate less exempt issues are due for an improvement.

It is difficult to say just what is the worth of United States credit apart from considerations of patriotism and tax exemption, but the record sustains the assertion that, however the worth of money may vary, a national obligation yielding 4 per cent. has always commanded a premium some time within its term. The time when the discount on the bonds bearing more than 4 per cent. shall disappear is not to be told with accuracy, but it is as sure as anything human. Those worried by their discounts are not the experienced. For the most part they are those who thought that their bonds could be spent as though they were money and that they were sure always to be worth par or more. They thought they could advance, as savings deposits cannot, and could not decline, although they must have known that even gold dollars vary in purchasing power. Their primary lesson in finance has been cheap to them, compared to their losses in other securities. They have their consolation in the thought that they have done themselves and their country a real service, and in some cases at sacrifices worthy of acknowledgment and appreciation.

The allotment of the notes throughout the country is on the same percentages as previously. Accordingly, the reduction in total is a relief to all districts, but to none so much as to New York. New York alone takes any responsibility for other districts. New York is expected to supply deficiencies in any or all districts. New York is equal to all demands upon either its resources or public spirit, and yet it would be glad if others ran it a closer race. Compare the $1,200,000,000 expected from New York with the $84,000,000 from the Texas district, where there is a billion-dollar oil "boom." There are ten Granger States whose bank deposits have led the increase since the last statement to a total for the country of $287,000,000, while the deposits in this city decreased $410,000,000. New York is thriving, nevertheless, and asks for no sympathy or assistance which all will ask from it, although its deposits come mostly from its loans and are not new wealth, such as has come to the banks of other States from the earth in a single year to a total larger than the Liberty Loans for the war period until now. New York will take its quota, and will take all that others wish to sell when the discount worries them. New York appreciates the country, and hopes in time that the country will appreciate New York. New York is strong because the country is strong. But this time the banks of New York look to their depositors to take the loan, and the country banks should do the same. The notes are not truly sold if the banks take them. To do most good the depositors should take them and pay for them from income. That would reduce the inflation of deposits and commodity prices.

WEBB LAW AMENDMENT.

Organization of export associations under the new Webb law has not been checked, although the Federal Trade Commission has rejected nearly half of the company charters submitted to it for approval and holds others in suspense because certain parts of them may be at variance with anti-trust statutes. Recent additions to the list are combinations formed in the pine lumber, meat packing, naval stores, and tobacco industries. At a large convention of Southern planters and bankers a committee was appointed to make a cotton export association, with $50,000,000 capital. This action was taken at the suggestion of W. P. G. HARDING of the Federal Reserve Board, who reported to the convention that the plan had been approved by the Federal Trade Commission's counsel.

It is expected that Congress will be asked to amend the Webb law, which confines an association's work to export trade. Many exporting manufacturers say that such a combination should also be permitted to import foreign products, and it is understood that some charters were rejected because they provided for importation. The argument in favor of permitting imports is that in some parts of the world the sales of an American exporting company may be restrained or prevented if it cannot accept in payment raw materials or other products instead of money in some form. Inability to trade in this way places the American at a disadvantage in competing with European export combinations. The Webb law's purpose was to enable our exporters to compete with the foreign associations on equal terms. It would seem that a carefully guarded amendment to the new statute, permitting imports when acceptance of them is essential, ought to be adopted. In many cases the effect would be beneficial, and domestic interests would have no ground for complaint.

A DARING VENTURE.

COLUMBUS in his caravel never faced such dangers as lie in the path of the audacious airmen who have been preparing to launch their "ships" into space for the passage of the Atlantic from the rocky shore of Newfoundland in a latitude where fogs abound at this season of the year and high winds are common. When WILBUR WRIGHT made a pioneer flight up the Hudson, a six-mile breeze was all the weather he cared to encounter. Half a gale doesn't bother an aviator today; the question he asks himself is whether he will have fuel enough and his engine will hold out for the distance he plans to travel. The development in the power of the airplane since the beginning of the great war has exceeded even the predictions of the visionaries. Yet in considering that the adventurers at St. John's purpose to fly to Ireland across nearly 2,000 miles of sea, it must be borne in mind that no aviator up to this time has made a nonstop flight of 1,000 miles.

Nevertheless, HAWKER and Lieut. Commander GRIEVE with their Sopwith biplane and Captain RAYNHAM and Major MORGAN with the rival Martinsyde, neither of which is a machine of impressive size and both of which are experiments, engaged to make the attempt to drive them over the Atlantic, an undertaking that would keep them in the air not less than twenty hours. There must be an irresistible fascination about aviation to cause men to risk their lives in attempting what seems to be the impossible. Would any insurance company write a policy upon the performance of these daring spirits? Lloyd's, which tackles almost any enterprise, may have given figures, but must have regarded the sporting chance as desperate.

It is not in the blood of the born aviator with the eyes of the world upon him to balk at any danger. What the four men at St. John's engaged themselves to attempt is not an undertaking of obligation, like going into battle against an alert and crafty enemy. The odds are heavily against the success of a trial of the Atlantic passage by airplanes at any season of the year, and at this season, when fogs quickly form and fitful northeast gales may blow with extraordinary violence, the odds pile up alarmingly. Old Father Time, if he could have had his say, would have got out an injunction against the adventurers at St. John's, but for men to interfere would be an infringement of personal liberty. Science argues that the thing might be done; success would be splendid; and the spectacle of these men defying death to achieve the heroic makes us all hold our breath in admiration.

If there were patrol boats all the way across the ocean a few miles apart, the flight to Ireland would not be facilitated, but the risk would be reduced to a minimum. However, no preparations to keep the aviators in countenance, to aid them in a pinch, have been made, and they have not been disposed to wait for guides and succor, so fierce has been their rivalry. And they have seemed to think that their reputation for courage was involved. Blow high or blow low, sunshine or fog, there will be two attempts to cross the Atlantic, leaving the gull and the petrel behind. In the history of aeronautics there has been nothing more desperate than the decision that HAWKER and GRIEVE made to sacrifice their directional wireless equipment and drop their undercarriage for the sake of speed. It was as if they were willing to embark on an uncharted sea and reach Europe or die in the attempt. Relying upon compass and sextant, that is to say without communicating by wireless with vessels at a distance, they cannot be sure of their course. They will carry a wireless equipment, it is true, but of a limited range, and in the event of not coming across ships almost in their path, navigation will be dubious, especially in thick weather.

As a matter of fact, Lieut. Commander GRIEVE may not know where his ship of the air is heading, or where it will come down. Should a descent into the sea be necessary, only an empty tank would keep them up, and the tank could not be emptied in an emergency without risking an explosion. Both the Sopwith and Martinsyde teams have lessened their chances of success and greatly increased the danger of the undertaking by rushing preparations to get away. If the Atlantic passage is practicable with airplanes, (as distinguished from seaplanes, which float as well as fly,) it may be a sober and leisurely candidate who will do the trick in triumph in a halcyon time.

OVID IN BULGARIA.

It was a bitter blow to PUBLIUS OVIDIUS NASO, the best selling poet of Augustan Rome, when the Emperor exiled him to a desolate town on the barren shores of the Black Sea as a punishment for too faithfully reflecting the manners of his time. There he lived his last years and there he died; nor did a gentleman used to the luxurious life of the capital of the world ever quite reconcile himself to the society of barbarous Scythians.

Two thousand years later OVID would have liked it better. By that time the town of Tomi had become Constantsa, one of the principal ports of Rumania and the Summer resort of the wealthy and ease-loving society of Bucharest. And every day gentlemen very much like OVID, and ladies whom OVID would have liked very much, passed through the Piatza Ovidiu, where a statue of the poet commemorated the first incursion, if an unwilling one, of the leisure class. In due course of time, however, Constantza fell into the hands of Scythians more ungracious than those among whom OVID had lived. When the Bulgarian Army overran the Dobrudja in 1916 it was followed by the expropriators whom all the Central Powers sent into occupied territory. The Bulgars, like the Germans, were acquisitive; they would take anything from factory machinery to first editions and Japanese prints. Among the plunder shipped back into Bulgaria from Constantza was the statue of OVID, once more an exile.

Malicious Rumanians have said that the Bulgars did not know who OVID was, that they thought the statue was that of the Mayor of Constantza. Whether this be true or not, the Bulgars have been considerably more careless about the preservation of classical remains than the Rumanians. Some years ago a great heap of stones with Roman inscriptions lay in a museum yard in Sofia, with grass growing among them; nobody had cared to take the trouble to carry them indoors. Perhaps OVID was thrown in among them to await such time as the Bulgar had leisure from his forays into other lands and could arrange his monuments of classical culture to suit himself; at any rate, OVID escaped the ignominy of being melted and turned into shell cases, for after vigorous protests from Rumania and the Allies the Bulgarian Government finally shipped him back to Constantza.

One could wish that all the wrongs suffered by Rumania could be so easily redressed, but a correspondent who has just finished a trip through the country reports great suffering—food shortage, disorganization of business, governmental financial difficulties, and misery among the peasantry. "Rumania is passing through a critical stage," is his conclusion. "She may survive or she may go down." The decision does not rest wholly with the outer world; unless the Rumanian Government has the strength to put into force the agrarian and political reforms which have long been urgent, the fabric of Rumanian society may be unable to stand the strain. But food relief is the first necessity; starving men are not able to do very much in the way of reform. Mr. HOOVER was able to deliver 26,000 metric tons of breadstuffs to Rumania last month, and if this can be increased and an equitable distribution assured, the Rumanian State may be able to correct its own shortcomings. One thing is certain, that Rumania has done a very considerable service to the rest of the world in holding back Bolshevism; and if Rumania goes down the chances of the democracies will be that much worse.

IN RESTRAINT OF THE BASEBALL TRADE.

A jury in a Federal court has assessed punitive damages against some baseball "magnates" for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. The case will be appealed, and it may be two or three years before we have a final decision as to whether or not the present organization of professional baseball, with two major leagues working in collaboration with a number of minor leagues, and players promoted up the scale and sent back down according to the judgment of the owners of the clubs, is a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

There are many intricacies about the structure of professional baseball and various are the arguments by which the club owners and their friends hope to get the verdict reversed. The case is cited of a Federal Judge who decided that racing was a sport, not a commodity; the courts may also have to decide whether a ball player's exertions are labor, and therefore not a commodity, or something else. It might distress men personally interested in baseball should the United States Supreme Court decide that their enterprise was trade and not sport, but the general public would probably agree with the court's view of it.

However, these questions are more or less beside the point, which is that whether organized professional baseball is a business or a sport, the American people want it, and on the whole are pretty well satisfied with it as it is. It may be that the present organization does violate the Sherman law; for it operates quite successfully against outside competition, and it puts the players very much at the mercy of the men who own the clubs.

But experience has shown that both of these arrangements are in the public interest, so long as the public wants professional baseball. If anybody who had enough money could start competing clubs in the large cities, organize them into competing leagues, and hire away the most popular players, the general average of playing ability in each club would be lowered, the game would be less scientific and therefore not so good a spectacle, and ultimately people would begin to stay away. In the end unrestricted bidding for players would almost certainly lead to the concentration of the men who could command high prices in New York and Chicago, where the clubs earn the largest profits; and if New York and Chicago always won the pennants interest would die out.

As for the players, who now and again have raised a plaintive wail against their "slavery" to the club owners, they are slaves only because they prefer to play ball instead of going to work. A player under contract can be legally prohibited from playing baseball for other clubs, but he cannot be prohibited from engaging in other occupations less profitable and glorious than his "slavery." Instances of unfair treatment of players by club owners exercising this power have not been numerous. Perhaps the present baseball system is contrary to the Sherman law, but experience shows that the public wants the game and that it can get what it wants most satisfactorily under this arrangement. The economic value of professional baseball is something of an artificial creation, and too much litigation would kill it as quickly as suspicion of the crookedness from which more than any other professional sport it has been free.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Another Victim of Reform.

Strong doubts as to whether there were any Turks who saw anything really objectionable in the massacre of Armenians, or, for that matter, of any other people not followers of the Prophet, have caused the recent occasional dispatches about the trials going on in Constantinople to be read with an approach to cynical amusement by most students of happenings on the Bosporus. One conviction, however, of responsibility for the atrocious treatment to which the Armenians were subjected now has been followed by the hanging of a high official—a provincial Governor—and for him, at least, there was nothing farcical about the proceedings.

His fate will have a truly depressing effect on the other officials of like rank now facing trial for carrying out, as he did, what they and he had the best of excuses, or of reasons, rather, for considering an established Turkish policy, and they can justly complain that they are the victims of a new and suddenly acquired disapproval of wholesale murder on the part of their judges. The convicted official and those who are still only under accusation did nothing but what was expected of them—nothing but what they and their kind have often been rewarded and promoted for doing in the past.

Their misfortune is that times have changed and that the Turkish Government now feels it necessary to sacrifice some of its agents in order to prove that, whatever it may have been in other days, it now shares the view of wholesale slaughter entertained by the nations with a more or less recognized claim to be called civilized. This is cruelly hard on the Beys and Pashas whose crime is that with vigor and earnestness they obeyed the orders they received from the seat of authority, but their position, after all, is as familiar as it is painful—to them—for always great innovations in government, as in industry, work hardship to those who have not been agile enough of mind or body to adapt themselves betimes to new conditions and demands.

There Were Certain Accomplices.

Before the hangings in Constantinople on account of Armenian and other massacres become numerous, they ought to include at least a few participants in the murderous work who were not Turks at all. All through the war the real rule of Turkey was in the hands of German military officers and diplomats.

Much done was by the direct command of these aliens and nothing done was without their permission and approval. They looked on, coldly and calmly, while helpless men, women, and children were slain by the hundreds of thousands, content that thus the situation in Turkey was simplified and its control made easier by alien masters. These are the men whose guilt is at least as great as is that of the Beys and Pashas who gave the orders, and their only justification was "military necessity." That they all ran home before the Allies arrived explains why none of them now faces trial, but if Germany ever does get a Government with a correct judgment of the war their day of retribution may come.

Traffic by River Reviving.

A curious result of the increase of freight and passenger rates on railways all over the country is a revival of activity on the inland waterways. The river steamboats, such few of them as were still struggling against the rival that ended their prosperity, have had a surprising increase of business, for they are still allowed to charge what they please and they have seized the opportunity and the possibility to charge for their services appreciably less than is demanded over the land routes, and already their patronage is considerable. Of course the boats famed in song and story are all gone, but their humble successors are still in operation or available, and not a few people on the Mississippi and its tributaries are again really traveling in the way immortalized by MARK TWAIN and JOHN HAY. In ordinary circumstances this is a competition which those engaged in it would be allowed to fight out without interference, but now it is hard to tell what will happen. The railways have a most powerful protector—one that may view severely the prospect of an increase in their already sufficient deficit—and the boat men may find themselves "regulated" in their ambitious effort to regain their old position. Popular sympathy, however, may save them, and everybody with a liking for the antique and the picturesque will wish them good luck.

A Selection Hard to Understand.

New light on the little mutiny of American soldiers in Northern Russia has been cast by the arrival of later news, and the episode is no longer quite as mysterious as it was. For it is now reported that the troops there are, for the most part, of an Americanism so recent as possibly to be not thoroughly ground in. In other words, the men who have been referred to so pathetically by several passionate orators as "our boys" were Russian, more or less, not long ago, and it is therefore not entirely surprising that they listened too attentively to the beguilings of the Bolshevist propagandists. Why Americans of this particular quality were sent to the Murmansk sector is presumably explicable, but the explanation does not occur instantly to all minds. The British, however, seem to have made the same or a like mistake, if mistake it was, in the choice of troops for this service. And anyhow, the mutiny was hardly deserving of a name so large and alarming. Nobody was hurt, and after a little quiet talk by an officer of evident discretion and judgment discipline was restored and duty done. There was a mere nibbling at the Bolshevist bait; it wasn't swallowed, and there is no measurable chance that it will be.

Canada and England.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read carefully the very interesting contribution from Mr. Philip Gibbs which appeared in your Saturday edition of THE TIMES under the heading of "After the War in Canada."

Permit me to express my deep appreciation of Mr. Gibbs's very able and illuminating lectures which he has given in a few cities in the United States and Canada. With the greater part of his article, "After the War in Canada," I am in sympathy, but he has certainly misinterpreted the attitude of Canada toward England's part in the great war; especially in the last paragraph he has shown clearly that his hurried visit to four or five Canadian cities did not yield to him the true Canadian spirit in relation to the Mother Country. There may be exceptions in Canada, but it is safe to say that in no part of the empire has there been a more general appreciation of the wonderful work done by Great Britain at home and at the front. Canada understands and appreciates the Motherland as never before the war.

THE TRANSATLANTIC FLIGHT.

Unto the wakened Element, its lover:
The Airplane, flying over!
Midocean hears those wings—
The high adventurings
Of man's soul, so desiring
The upper skies—so long aspiring!
Always there have been ready
Heroes whose wills were steady—
Who were in love with the Unknown.
How soon to come into their own!
Even now, they robe for flying—
They, the Undying!
Yes, though they were to fall,
'Twere to Valhalla's hall!
Shine, sun and moon of Ajalon,
Such deathlessness upon!
Wane, tempest, and be gentle, storm,
When wings the Chosen's form!
O sunlight, flash on
This new, immortal passion,
This heaven-intoxicated science.
Irreverent, but absolved defiance,
Man's powers gloriously taxing
Earth at your waxing,
And answering aether tidal,
This is your ever-destined moment
bridal.

PHILIP GIBBS BIDS AMERICA AU REVOIR

War Correspondent Says He Has Found Its People the Greatest Idealists in the World Instead of Selfish Dollar Chasers.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

After two months in the United States I am going back to England with many memories of a great people who are standing, like other peoples of the world, at the open door of destiny.

To me it has been a wonderful two months, because of a personal experience far beyond anything that I expected, or dreamed of, as a reward for humble service in the writing of history through four years of war. I have had, I think, the most beautiful reward that any man in the world could have—and that is the gift of friendship, generous, overflowing, bountiful, of vast numbers of men and women, among whom I came, as I thought, a stranger.

I was not in actual fact a stranger to them, because as a writer of words I had given myself away to them, and for four years had been served up with their grapefruit on their breakfast tables. Over in France and Flanders I did not know what people were reading the things I wrote; nor did I care. Half the time I did not even know what I was writing, but wrote in a mad hurry and instinctively, without a thought to the turn of a phrase, but with the desire to get everything down, in utter simplicity, of the things I had seen and of the things that had happened in another day of war.

I did not think of the American people reading those dispatches of mine. I thought mostly of English fathers and mothers who would know from what I had written that there had been another bloody battle, in which their sons had been desperately engaged, and perhaps had fallen. But the American people were reading, too, with immense sympathy for this suffering of heroic boyhood and with intense desire to know what was happening in the fields of war. Because I wrote rather of the spirit of men than of strategy, (where there was no strategy,) and of war's human side, with its agony and its courage, rather than of its hatred and its inhuman mechanism, something in my narrative reached out to the spirit of America, touched its tenderness and its pity, and inspired it with that generous emotion which I find is stirred so easily among the people of the United States. For that reason it is, I think, that they have given me a welcome and a friendship of close and personal warmth which I shall never forget in humble gratitude. It has been my fortune to be remembered with the tears they shed for the tragedy of the battlefields and with the wonder they had at the valor of men in the gateways of death; because I was the chronicler of those facts. Though the reward has been too great for a man who was writing and not fighting, I am glad of it and cherish it in my heart.

In these two months I have been studying the American people in a quiet way, trying to analyze their character as far as one may get in touch with it during such a visit as this, and seeking also to know in what direction they are traveling now that the world is on the move again to a new era of human history. It is impossible to sum up a whole people, full of diversities of character, race, and ideas, and, at the present time, seething with the tumult of patriotic and political impulses without any definite conviction of their immediate destiny. But one does get a glimpse of certain strong and general qualities among the people of the United States, and of certain tendencies likely to lead them in one direction.

I have, for instance, heard a lot about the Americans being a hard practical people exclusively engaged in the chase of the almighty dollar, and quite selfish in the exploitation of their own material interests. My reading of them is entirely different. So far from being hard and material they seem to me the greatest idealists in the world at the present time, and to be emotional almost to the point of sentimentality. In any public gathering, at any private dinner table, the idealist takes all the applause, finds it easy to put a spell over his company, and can express his own sentiment with a simplicity and emotion which would cause a smile or an ironical shrug in the sophisticated circles of England or France.

The almighty dollar is chased earnestly enough. I find it is a necessary item of one's life in New York, for example. But the American people give it away out of their margin of wealth—however small that margin may be—with astonishing generosity, provided their pursestrings are tugged by an emotional appeal. The professional beggar, if he has sentiment to back him, has a wonderful time in this country, and if he begs on behalf of a cause which seems right and noble, like the Red Cross, or devastated France, or starving Armenia, largess is scattered before him, not only by millionaires who are glad to get rid of their burden, but by working girls who have to scrape over their midday luncheon, and by business men whose pockets are tempted by a "tin Lizzie" or a country cottage in New Jersey.

The heart of the hardest American manufacturer who is a stern disciplinarian in his city office, a "speeder-up" in his works, with a portrait of Napoleon opposite his desk, and a masklike face which would frighten a thug, goes "fut" when some spellbinder announces a nursery moral with an air of discovery, or when a little "cutie" bursts into tears on the other side of his blotting pad and asks for a rise in salary because her heart is broken at the sight of a new hat. He simply cannot resist an appeal like that—if I know anything about him—and Napoleon winks his eye above the desk.

Traveling around I find that the expert in ladies' neckwear who made a great fight for fortune since he handled his first dime in the New York streets lives and works entirely on simple ideals of probity which might have been written by Louisa M. Alcott; and that the Lieutenant Colonel of a regiment just back from France, a hard fighter and stern in his way of command, has the idealism of honor and chivalry belonging to the school of "Eric; or, Little by Little." A young gentleman in one of our English public schools, or a first-year man at Oxford, with a cynical philosophy of life adopted as a tradition, would blush to confess to such sound sentiment.

Writing seriously, I find the American people ripe for action of unselfish idealism of which few nations would be capable. There is throughout the United States, as far as I have been able to discover, a great stirring of emotion, due to the war and to the generous sacrifice they have made, which demands something higher and nobler in the next chapter of their history than material gain and selfish safety. There are, of course, in America, as in all countries, Prussians, Junkers, Thugs, Gunmen, Bohunks, and Bad Men, and these are making a lot of noise, and saying, "Why the hell this?" and "Why the hell that?" and demanding the complete isolation of America surrounded by flame, so that nothing can go out and nothing come in; and spreading around poison against England and France, and sharpening tomahawks for the scalps of President Wilson, Lloyd George, General Pershing, and all the democrats. But I am convinced that those people do not carry much weight with the American people as a whole and that the spirit of America will rise above them and not heed them more than bullfrogs in a dark pool.

I have found among most people a desire for a closer friendship with England and a determination to befriend France in peace as well as in war. In spite of all the personal prejudice with which Mr. Wilson is surrounded, and it is gusty with strong winds blowing, I find a general approval of some plan like the League of Nations which may abolish great standing armies in Europe and get rid at least of the gunpowder barrel which was apt to go off when sparks began to fly.

I have found, in many cities of the United States, bodies of people working, thinking, talking, earnestly and eager to devote their souls and to dedicate their hearts to the service of humanity so that what has happened in the fields of Europe shall not happen soon again, and so that the common peoples of the world shall have greater safety and better luck. It is a spiritual purpose among a great people which must count in the future of the world unless it is made powerless by the baser passions of political groups pulling the wires behind the scenes. As I have written before, America's generous instincts are perplexed by natural fears of being led into unknown paths in the jungle of Europe where she may not have free action and may be tangled in troubles not of her concern. Those fears, and a lack of clear guidance, make her people hesitate, draw back a little, shrink from the enormous responsibilities which face her.

I have no right to address the American people, except as a humble friend owing big debts to them; but in this farewell message before leaving for England I would say very simply and earnestly:

Your supreme hour is at hand, when after your youth among the peoples of the world you are now to shoulder the burdens which come to manhood, the pack of troubles belonging to people other than your own, lifted because they had your strength to help them, and because they belong to the human family from which you cannot isolate yourself without cowardice and dishonor. Isolation is no longer possible for you. Your spiritual as well as your material interests are closely linked up with the fate of other peoples. If there is another war against France and England—and there may be during this generation, unless you help the powers at work for peace—your sons will be called to serve at once, without any waiting, and your flesh and blood will be used as gun-fodder in war's sacrifice.

You have the power now to prevent that next war by rising to the spiritual call which is summoning you to the highest place in the Commonwealth of the world's democracies. If you turn a deaf ear to that summons, and a cold shoulder to the democratic spirit, you will surrender the greatest chance of honor which any nation has had in modern history. But you will not surrender this big chance for smaller interests because you have the soul of a brave and generous people. Between England and America there must be friendship unless the folly of men is beyond all reckoning.

I go back to England with a deep admiration of America and a warm affection for all those American people who have given me their friendship. It is not good-bye I am going to say but only "Au revoir, America—and here's my love to you!"

LOUIS XVI.'S DESK IN ART MUSEUM

Gift of Jacques Seligmann in Memory of J. P. Morgan and as Souvenir to America.

FROM SCOTT COLLECTION

Handsome Relic Has Many Secret Drawers and Concealed Keys in the Form of Jewels.

There is to be seen in the Recent Accessions Room of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, placed as exhibition today, its most recent gift and the rarest piece of furniture it ever expects to own—a cylinder desk, with the Bourbon lilies surmounted by a crown, in a cartouche, at the front and back, indicating that it was the property of Louis XVI. of France.

The desk, which is a magnificent piece of furniture, of mahogany, with lines of ebony and adornment of ormolu, hand chiseled, is a gift to the Museum from Jacques Seligmann of Paris, given as a memorial to the late President of the Museum, J. Pierpont Morgan, and as a thank offering to America. Mr. Seligmann's words in the presentation of the desk are:

"In memory of J. P. Morgan and as a souvenir of the help which the Americans have given to France during the war."

The desk is a relic of a kind which is practically never on the market, and if for sale would be at a prohibitive price. It is from the famous Murray Scott, better known as the Wallace, collection, which was bequeathed to Lady Sackville, from whom Mr. Seligmann purchased it. Sir Richard Wallace, who gave the collection his name, inherited the greater part of it from the Marquis of Hertford, the celebrated connoisseur.

It is a large and remarkable piece of cabinet work, with two chairs a part of its structure, one at the front and the other at the back. These when pushed into place in the desk, form naturally a part of its frame work. The chair at the front is supposed to be that of the owner, the King, that at the back for his secretary and through small doors opening in the centre of the desk papers could be passed back and forth. A large slide pulls out for the writer at the front of the desk and a small one for the secretary at the rear. There are many secret drawers, leather lined, some of them sufficiently large to conceal crown jewels. There are innumerable keys to the desk, one small one being the key of keys. This opens a small drawer, in which is a large key with an elaborate handle. The keyhole which it fits is concealed by an ormolu mount at the front of the desk, which is displaced when a secret spring is touched. The key then must be turned a certain number of times to open the desk. There is a small button for opening the different drawers or compartments, each where it fits onto the lock being of different form to distinguish it easily, a diamond, a heart, &c.

A rare piece of Chinese sculpture has been acquired by the museum, a votive tablet, Wei period, the date given on it, A. D. 534. It is 61 inches high and 33 wide and is said to have come from Hwayin in Shensi, near the border of Honan. It is placed in the museum upon a stand which turns on ball bearings, and not only the sculptured face, but the back with inscriptions and incised drawings may be seen.

In the Recent Accessions Room is to be seen a gift from Adolph Lewisohn, a delightful pastel by Albert Sterner, "The Blue Stocking."

ART NOTES.

American and Foreign Paintings to be Sold in Aid of France.

At the American Art Galleries is a collection of American and foreign paintings consigned by various estates and private owners. Among the American examples are a number by Robert L. Newman characteristically warm in tone and emotional in treatment; an unusually fine example of the earlier work of Kenneth Hayes Miller, two good little landscapes by Charles Melville Dewey, two or three Blakelocks, a Wyant, a version of Cole's "Voyage of Life," and an important figure study by John La Farge of "Maua, a Samoan," which is described and explained by the artist by a long inscription in his brilliant, intimate, and scrupulous style. "Maua is not tattooed," he says, "(so that his legs are not bluish, looking as if silk blue-black drawers were worn.) He ought to be tattooed, but I think is afraid of the pain. He will make believe that it is uncivilized or perhaps will trot out the church, for he is a leader in prayer—in any small devilry as well. He is not handsome, as you see, but he is intelligent. I thought I could get him to sit on that account, as it is difficult to get natives to pose well, but he could hardly keep quiet a minute. I had only a few hours to paint this in, and was at work when the call was made for our boat to leave for Tahiti. Hence unfinished."

Possibly because Maua in his green loin dress, seated under greenery and red flowers, was carried no further than just to the point where his ugly beauty and easy-going character unite with the rich environment, it is one of the handsomest of Mr. La Farge's Samoan studies.

C. W. Hawthorne is represented by a figure subject done when he was in his earliest twenties and so beautifully done that any collector might prefer it to a later example. This, with a number of the other pictures, will be sold for the benefit of the American Committee for Devastated France. The sale will take place tonight and tomorrow night.

REPLIES TO BURLESON.

C. H. Mackay Says His "Explanations for Increase Don't Explain."

Clarence H. Mackay, President of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, yesterday issued a reply to Postmaster General Burleson's explanations why a 20 per cent. increase in telegraph rates was essential. Mr. Mackay declared that the Postmaster General's "explanations don't explain."

"I find, however, that the real explanation is to be found in the report of the Western Union Telegraph Company for 1918 to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has just been filed. It appears from an analysis of that report that Mr. Burleson has paid that company as compensation for five months, August to December inclusive, more than that company earned in the extent of about $2,500,000. This means a loss of over $5,000,000 for a whole year. Why did he give them more than they earned? And why did he give the Postal Company less than half of what it earned? If Mr. Burleson had given both companies exactly what they earned and no more, there would have been no occasion for raising the telegraph rates 20 per cent. The Postal Company has repeatedly said it would be content with what it earned.

"And even if Mr. Burleson was willing to saddle the Government with a loss of $5,000,000 over-payment to the Western Union, why does he now saddle the public with $16,000,000 of increased telegraph rates? He gives the Western Union $5,000,000 more than it should get, gives the Postal $2,000,000 less than it should get, and then extorts from the public $16,000,000 more than there is any occasion or excuse for extorting.

An 82d Division Parade.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The citizens of Atlanta are pleading for the return of the 82d Division intact to that city. My son is an officer in the 82d Division. Like his father and mother, he was born and has lived here always. One-half of his company, he told us, after the Argonne, were east side New York boys.

In my opinion, our citizens' committees should bend all their energies to get these boys of all the divisions together—the boys who went out from New York, who belong here—and let them parade. Hold it all off until Decoration Day or July 4. Then organize a parade and reception to the boys of New York. That will mean something.

Atlanta wants the 82d Division. The men appreciate the kindly Southern chivalry that prompts the request, but how many New Yorkers could travel to Atlanta to see the parade, and what will it mean by comparison with a march here at home?

Temporary Churches for France.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you allow me, as President of a society engaged in collecting funds to provide temporary sanctuaries in the devastated regions of France, to appeal through THE NEW YORK TIMES for help to carry on this necessary work of charity and religion? In the regions referred to churches have been destroyed, and some arrangements must be made for public worship. The amount needed is considerable, and we must reach out through the entire country. In this respect your readers can help us greatly, and their aid will be much appreciated.

Wilhelm and His Victims.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read in your issue of Saturday "Some A B C's," and I was very pleased to see how clearly you define for the public the position of Germany and the Allies. Unfortunately there is in some people a disposition to forget and to be too lenient toward Germany.

We are so far away from these devastated regions that it is hard for the persons living in this country, with comfort and surrounded by their beloved ones, to realize the terrible misery of the poor people who, having gone through these four years of hell, find themselves today in the worst of distress, having lost everything. Family ties broken forever, homes destroyed, health gone, children crying for food, and one knows what all that means for the French people, one of the most affectionate races in the world, and to whom home is such a sacred thing. How many girls who had dreamed of a useful life beside a dear husband, bringing up lovely children, will never know that great happiness on account of the killing of our French boys!

And, meanwhile, Wilhelm, all his family, and his other accomplices, responsible for the greatest crime of the world, are allowed to live in castles with all the comfort money can give!

Yesterday I was speaking with an American gentleman of high standing and culture, and we were both wondering how such an injustice could exist. Why not confiscate the riches of all these criminals and distribute them to their poor victims? It would be simply fair, and it ought to have been done long ago. Let us hope peace is going to be concluded with the full sense of justice, giving to the devastated countries all the reparations they have the right to expect.

WOOLWORTH DIED WITH WILL UNSIGNED

Death Came So Suddenly That Document, Long Under Consideration, Was Not Executed.

DEMENTED WIFE GETS ALL

Estate of Between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000 Disposed Of Under Will Made in 1889.

The family of Frank Winfield Woolworth made public yesterday the fact that Mr. Woolworth's death came so suddenly that he did not have time to execute an extended will upon which he had been long at work, making many public bequests to charities and public institutions and gifts to friends, associates, and trusted employes. Accordingly, his estate of between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000 will be distributed under a will made in 1889 by which he gave all his property to his wife, Jennie Woolworth, and made her the sole executrix of his estate.

Mrs. Woolworth was declared incompetent because of mental derangement last June, and upon the request of Mr. Woolworth and his daughters, Mrs. Helen McCann, wife of Charles E. F. McCann, and Mrs. Jessie M. Donohue, wife of James P. Donohue, Supreme Court Justice Finch named Hubert T. Parson, Vice President, General Manager, and Treasurer of the F. W. Woolworth Company, for many years Mr. Woolworth's closest business associate, and for three years directing head of his interests, as the committee of her property. Accordingly, because of Mr. Woolworth advising the naming of Mr. Parson as committee of Mrs. Woolworth's property, the way is cleared for the appointment of Mr. Parson as substituted executor in place of his ward when the thirty-year-old will is filed for probate.

Charles E. F. McCann, who made public the facts concerning Mr. Woolworth's will in the private office established by Mr. Woolworth on the twenty-first floor of the building he erected at 233 Broadway, said that the will making the incompetent widow of Mr. Woolworth his sole heir and executrix would be filed in Nassau County in a week or ten days. Before that time it will be determined whether the duties of Mr. Parson as head of the ten-cent store and Woolworth Building interests of the estate will permit him to take on himself also the duties of administering the estate.

The statement by Mr. McCann to reporters, in the presence of Mr. Parson, James McV. Breed of Breed, Abbott & Morgan, Mr. Woolworth's attorneys, and James P. Donohue, the other son-in-law, was as follows:

"Mr. Woolworth, prior to his death, had for some time been working upon a will which was just about completed, but due to his unexpected death he did not execute the same. This will contained charitable and other bequests and gifts to relatives and old friends, and to old and trusted employes of his home. These bequests the family intend carrying out as far as it is in their power to do so. The will to be offered for probate in a week or ten days was made July 31,—1889, thirty years ago, and covers what would be about one page of typewritten matter. By its terms everything is left to his wife, Jennie Woolworth. She is named as the sole executrix in the said will."

Mr. McCann, acting under the instructions of all members of the family, said that nothing would be made public now, nor at any time, concerning the provisions of the will that Mr. Woolworth didn't have time to execute before he died.

"The family deem that to be a personal matter in which they alone are concerned," he said.

Mr. McCann said he could give no estimate of the value of the estate until the schedules have been prepared.

Because of undented statements in the past to the effect that $7,500,000 of French capital had been invested in the Woolworth Building, Mr. Parson said yesterday on that point:

"It was Mr. Woolworth's ambition to have this building go down to posterity without a cent of indebtedness as a monument to his name. Was this ambition realized? It was. There is not a cent of debt on the building. Mr. Woolworth owned it practically outright. A good many years ago when the construction of the building was being arranged French capitalists sent a representative here who offered to put up $7,500,000. They were so sure that they were going to be able to put the deal through that the representative notified the newspapers that it was a certainty. Mr. Woolworth declined the offer of outside capital and put up the building alone. It cost $13,000,000 to build, but at the present valuation of materials the building is worth almost any valuation put upon it."

Mrs. Woolworth made a will before she became incompetent, which is a valid document and under which the property she received from her husband will be distributed. It is understood that she names as her heirs her daughters, Mrs. McCann and Mrs. Donohue, and her granddaughter, Barbara Hutton, daughter of the deceased Woolworth daughter, Mrs. Edna Hutton. It is understood that the two daughters and the granddaughter will divide the property equally upon the death of Mrs. Woolworth, and for this reason the announcement was made through Mr. McCann that they would see that the terms of the unexecuted will were largely carried out.

There are many precedents in the records of the Surrogate's Court and also in the Supreme Court under which the eventual heirs of the Woolworth estate would be justified in asking the Surrogate of Nassau County for a partial distribution of the estate at present, in form of principal or income, because of the incompetency of the sole heir, but it was stated that the heirs have as yet made no decision on that point. They are all independently wealthy, Mr. McCann said.

MRS. BACON'S WILL FILED.

Bequests Made to Columbia, Harvard, and Smithsonian Institution.

The will of Mrs. Virginia Purdy Bacon, a granddaughter of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, who died on April 7 at 247 Fifth Avenue, makes several public bequests. Columbia receives $25,000 and Harvard University and the Smithsonian Institution each receive $50,000, while an equal sum goes to All Souls Church in Baltimore for the maintenance of the Clarence Barker Memorial Hospital. Mrs. Bacon gave a portrait of her brother, Edward R. Bacon, to the Metropolitan Museum and one of herself to the Museum of Fine Arts at Bordeaux, France.

Mrs. Bacon left her share of her grandfather's estate to her nephew, Harold Oakley Barker, of 246 West End Avenue. She gave diamond earrings and a blue enameled watch to her cousin, Mrs. Cornelia Vanderbilt, of Biltmore, N. C., and a diamond necklace to Mrs. Florence Twombley of 684 Fifth Avenue, also a cousin. The residue goes to her nephew, Harold Oakley Barker, and the children of her sister, Mrs. Alice McVeigh. Mrs. Bacon did not mention her sister, Adele E. Barker Schmidt, of Godersburg, Germany.

CALL WOMEN'S CONFERENCE

Meeting to be Held in Buffalo to Consider Legislative Program.

The Women's Joint Legislative Conference yesterday sent out a call for a Statewide convention to be held at Buffalo, May 12, embracing delegates from the New York State Suffrage Party, the New York Women's Trades Union League, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Consumers' League of this city, and representatives of thirty or more other organizations which have indorsed measures for the protection of women in industry, for the purpose of considering its legislative program, which has met with opposition in the Legislature.

The call to the convention said: "By the time the conference is held this session of the Legislature will probably be over. If our legislative program or any portion of it has been defeated by the Republican machine in the Assembly after its passage in the Senate, it will be our duty to consider what steps to take in order to insure its passage by the Legislature of 1920."

Three of the bills, providing for health insurance, a minimum wage, and the eight-hour day, were passed by the Senate last week and are now in the Rules Committee of the Assembly.

EDWARD T. FRENCH DEAD.

Son of Amos T. French, Who Wed Telephone Girl, Dies in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 14.—It was announced tonight that Edward Tuck French, son of Amos Tuck French and Pauline French, who married a New Hampshire telephone operator, died suddenly in Chicago. No information as to the cause of death was given. The news was a great shock to his mother.

Edward Tuck French was married last June to Miss Lillian Harrington, a telephone operator of Manchester, N. H. He was 20 years old and a student at Harvard. His mother cut off his allowance. His bride deserted him after four days, but later returned and they were reconciled. For the third time she forsook him and then, in August, he gave up all hope of "making up" with her and joined the Tank Corps of the United States Army. His father at the time was reported to be living in Paris with his second wife, who was Miss Martha Beeckman, sister of Governor Beeckman of Rhode Island.

Medal for Hero Aviator.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Award of the Congressional medal of honor to the late Second Lieutenant Frank Luke, Jr., for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in action near Murvaux, France, Sept. 29, 1918, was announced today by the War Department.

Mercier Coming Next October.

PARIS, April 14.—Cardinal Mercier, primate of Belgium, has informed the American Congressmen visiting Brussels that he intends to visit the United States next October.

EXHORTS AMERICA NOT TO FORGET WAR

CALLS GERMANY A PERIL

Takes Up Bolshevist Problem and Advocates Firing Squad Instead of Investigations.

"I have just concluded a trip that has taken me twice across the whole United States," said Isaac F. Marcosson, the writer and lecturer, in the Hotel Arlington yesterday. "The most amazing discovery that I made on this trip is the well-night incredible fact that America is forgetting the war. It is as great a crime to forget the war as not to have fought in it at all. It is one thing to have won the war and quite another and equally important a thing to see that the war stays won. This troubled hour is as much a time of rededication as it is a period of economic reconstruction. There is a patriotism of peace as potent as the patriotism of war, and the great mass of our people do not seem to have discovered it.

"The curse of America today is a dangerous optimism that finds expression in, 'We have nothing to fear from Germany. She is down and out.' No fallacy could be more costly. Long contact with German propaganda in every neutral country in Europe makes me believe that there is a great deal of camouflage about Germany's protestations that she is economically crushed. If the truth were really known, Germany prepared as thoroughly for peace as she labored forty years for war."

Mr. Marcosson gave as his reasons for the belief that Germany could restore herself that she had, as no other country, learned the supreme lesson of self-sufficiency; that practically the entire German war debt was owed at home; that German industry was more efficient and intensive than ever before, and that she had segregated immense stores of raw material. "On the day the armistice was signed," Mr. Marcosson said, "she owned nearly a billion of dollars' worth of cotton and wool in Switzerland, much of which I have seen with my own eyes. In Spain she possesses half a billion dollars' worth of rubber and copper. She has practically a monopoly on the Swedish iron ore output.

"All this material is being converted into merchandise in German-owned factories in Switzerland, Holland, Sweden, and Spain. It does not bear the brand of Commercial Cain—'Made in Germany,' but it is stamped 'Made in Switzerland,' 'Made in Holland,' 'Made in Sweden,' and 'Made in Spain.' It is already in competition with American and British goods in the neutral markets and, if unchecked, will soon be flooding our own."

More important, however, Mr. Marcosson said, was the German economic conquest of Russia. "Allied business enterprises," he continued, "will never overcome this handicap. No first aid to the German economic restoration is more valuable than this vast Slavic treasure house practically at her front door."

Taking up a discussion of Bolshevism, Mr. Marcosson said:

"Bolshevism—the universal menace today—is a German product. German framed and German financed, the prize package of discord that Teutonic cunning has handed the world. I was in Petrograd when Lenine arrived. Figuratively, I watched him open his Pandora box of dissension and let loose a poison gas. I have smelled its fumes in half a dozen different countries since that time. Nowhere have they been more deadly than in this very United States of ours, where the reptile of Bolshevism rears its head as the I. W. W. It has standardized anarchy, put a premium on destruction, imposed a penalty on prosperity. It is the new Prussianism.

"If we in the United States are to profit by Kerensky's mistake, we will meet new forces of evil with the forces of might. The American Bolsheviki, otherwise the I. W. W., need the firing squad instead of the Federal inquiry. Disloyalty to the costly fruits of peace is no less treacherous than disloyalty to the nation at war. The I. W. W.'s of today are full mates to the spies and Pro-Germans of yesterday."

MAKE CELEBRATION PLANS.

New Viaduct in Park Avenue to be Opened Tomorrow.

Representatives of the 42d Street Committee, the Fifth Avenue Association, and other civic and commercial organizations held a meeting in the Astor Trust Building yesterday to discuss the plans for the formal opening of the new steel viaduct in Park Avenue that is to make Fourth and Park Avenues one continuous thoroughfare despite the obstacle of the Grand Central Terminal.

The formal celebration dedicating the viaduct and opening up through traffic on the avenue will be held at noon tomorrow. A parade headed by the Police Band will form at noon at Thirty-fourth Street and Park Avenue and march north over the new viaduct. After marching around the Grand Central Terminal to Forty-fourth Street the procession will go to the Hotel Commodore, where a luncheon will be held. Borough President Frank L. Dowling and George McAneny, former President of the Board of Aldermen, will lead the parade and the members of the civic associations will march.

Speakers at the luncheon in the Commodore will be Borough President Dowling, Mr. McAneny, John McE. Bowman of the Bowman group of hotels, Robert Grier Cooke of the Fifth Avenue Association, William H. Page, and Police Commissioner Enright. Other associations to be represented are the Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade, the Murray Hill Association, the Broadway Association, the Murray Hill Taxpayers' Association, and the Merchants' Association.

NORMA WINSLOW A BRIDE.

Miss Norma Winslow, the actress, who has been engaged in Red Cross work in Paris for the last six months, returned last Friday on the Megantic as Mrs. Louis R. Darwen, although the news of her marriage abroad did not become known until yesterday. She was married on March 14 to Captain Louis R. Darwen of the Royal Field Artillery, British Army. The ceremony was performed in St. George's, the English Church, in Paris.

Miss Winslow's last appearance in New York was when she played Marjorie Rambeau's part in the "Eyes of Youth." Other productions in which she has appeared were "The Outcast," "Over Night," "The Man Higher Up," and "The Calamity."

Captain Darwen and his bride are staying at the Great Northern Hotel, and plan to return to London in three weeks, when Miss Winslow is to play under the direction of Alfred Butt.

BRITISH TO LIFT BARS ON NEUTRAL CABLES

Only American Censorship to be Exercised After Thursday—Germans Permitted to Communicate

PARIS, April 14, (Associated Press.)—The associated Governments have authorized the resumption of postal, cable, and wireless communication between Germany and neutral countries to a limited extent in order to enable the full operation of the food arrangement reached at Brussels on March 14. The decision is based on recognition of the fact that the export of the commodities with which Germany is to pay for food imports cannot be inaugurated unless the Germans are able to make arrangements to sell their goods by letters and telegraph.

Communications regarding imports will be confined for the present to foodstuffs, while those regarding exports may contain no reference to securities other than negotiable instruments nor to commodities whose export is forbidden under the agreement, such as gold and silver wares and material.

The mails and the cables will be censored by the Allies to prevent abuse of the privilege. Use of the wireless will be permitted only if the Germans consent to adequate central machinery for censorship purposes. This relaxation applies only to communications of non-speculative character.

Abolition of British censorship on American cable communications with the neutral States of Northern Europe will become effective April 18. Such messages hereafter will be submitted only to American censorship and will not be interfered with in transit through Great Britain.

Dinner in Lord Reading's Honor.

The Earl of Reading will be the guest of the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents at a dinner at the Hotel Plaza on April 24. The occasion will be of an international character, the countries to be represented including America, Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Scandinavia, Argentina, Australia, and Canada. Rear Admiral Sims will be present.

Dr. Jefferson Scales.

Dr. Jefferson Scales, for more than forty years a practicing physician in Staten Island, retiring three years ago, died yesterday at his residence, Tompkinsville, S. I., in his seventy-fifth year. He began practice in Reidsville, N. C., going to Staten Island in 1881.

ADVERSE BASEBALL DECISION NOT TO ALTER MAJOR LEAGUE PLANS FOR THIS SEASON

TRADE MARK

The City of GOODRICH Akron, Ohio

Every Man is a Wise Man

Because every man has something to teach; the thing life through experience has taught him to do.

Nature but reproduces: man's experience taking the world where Nature stops builds it better; whether he makes an iron plow to improve the crooked stick—

Or turns mere rubber and cotton into pneumatic tires.

Experience is that unseen thing in tires, the quality of which turns them out good or bad.

It vouches for Goodrich experience that Goodrich made the first American pneumatic tire, and ever since has fathered the improvement of automobile tires.

It shows in burly, full-rounded bodies, and thicker BLACK SAFETY TREADS, extra wide, fortifying the sidewall against rut scraping.

FANS AND PLAYERS NEED NOT WORRY

Federal Verdict Will Not Affect Baseball as Far as Diamond Is Concerned.

GAME TO GO ON AS USUAL

Pending Appeal, Present Contracts to be Observed—"Blessing in Disguise," Says Huston.

The court decision branding organized baseball as a trust will in no way affect the major league season, which opens next week. As far as the fan in the bleachers is concerned, it will be the same old game, conducted in the same old way. The National Commission has notified all major league clubs to proceed with the important business of winning the pennant as usual, and to observe all legal contracts. Plans for the reconstruction of the game will be held in reserve until appeal of the suit of the Baltimore Federal League Club has been heard. If the higher courts sustain the verdict, no change will be made which will affect the game or the spectator. Changes, if any, will have to do with the business organization of the pastime.

The baseball system has been called to the attention of the Department of Justice, and the department has decided that no reason was perceived for governmental interference. If there is any worrying to do about the future, that is the duty of the club owners. The fans and the players will continue in their own joyful way, and, as for the Polo Grounds patron, there is no need of his sitting up nights because Ban Johnson has been called a "Czar" or because John Heydler and August Herrmann have been hailed as "pirates" in open court.

Colonel T. L. Huston, Vice President of the Yankees, said yesterday that he believed the branding of organized baseball as a trust would prove a "blessing in disguise."

"There has been so much suspicion during the last few years that certain phases of the game would not stand a legal test," said Colonel Huston to a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday, "that it will be a great benefit to clear the pastime of all this uncertainty. Regardless of how the appeal of the Baltimore Federal League results, I think there will be a readjustment of the national game. It seems to me that the baseball people can get together and eliminate all the features of contracts and organization which for so many years have been a subject of constant agitation.

"It should be a relief for the game to have all legal uncertainty eliminated. The reconstruction process should help the game and do away with all the bickering about contracts and one thing or another in which baseball fans are not in the least interested.

"The laws of baseball and the regulation governing contracts have been necessary for the maintenance of the game because of the limited number of high-class players. What the game needs more than anything else is some sort of a plan for developing young players so that the supply of high-class players would be increased. If there was a large supply of good players the present type of contract would not be necessary.

"Schools of baseball would be a great thing for the game. The old players stay in the game too long and the young ones have to be carried with a club for too long a time before they are ready for their major league careers. The old players should be appointed as instructors to school young players for big league careers. In fact, it would be a good plan for each club to maintain a baseball school where its own instructors could develop promising youngsters.

"A large supply of players would do away with any necessity for the present-day methods of holding them. I believe that provision for producing more players will be one of the schemes which is sure to result from the present situation," said Colonel Huston.

He has just returned from Jacksonville, where he has watched the Yankees in action, and believes that Hugins is going to have a much stronger club than last year. Colonel Huston says the addition of Duffy Lewis will strengthen the club considerably, and he hopes that Halas and Vick will continue to show sufficient strength to be retained. The Yankee official has great praise for the work of Muddy Ruel, the young catcher. He says he is a better backstop right now than Al Walters, who was traded to Boston.

Speaking of the outcome of the baseball trust litigation in Washington, Harry H. Frazee, owner of the world's champion Red Sox, said that he believed organized baseball would win the action on an appeal. No action would be taken, he said, toward reconstruction until the appeal had been settled, and he thought that this would take considerable time, especially if the decision of the Court of Appeals was in turn carried to the Supreme Court of the United States.

President John A. Heydler of the National League, said yesterday that organized ball would base its appeal on the contention that baseball was not a part of commerce, as was ruled by Justice Stafford. Mr. Heydler explained that the feature of the baseball organization which he believed had a great deal to do with the decision against the game, was the national agreement between the major and minor leagues.

This agreement has already been broken mutually by both parties to the compact. Last Winter, at the joint meeting of the minors and majors here, the minors voluntarily abrogated the agreement. In the future they will go their own way and conduct their own business. Pending a written understanding of this abrogation, the leagues are operated under the old system. The minors, however, have appointed a committee to meet the National Commission and break off relations officially. This will mean that minor league players in the future, instead of being drafted, will be purchased by the majors.

President Heydler said that the baseball people hoped to have the appeal of the baseball case settled next Winter, and if the decision at that time should be against organized ball, the case will be carried to the Supreme Court.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 14.—In a statement issued by the National Baseball Commission here today the Supreme Court of Baseball announces that the decision of Judge Stafford at Washington in the suit of the Baltimore Federal League Club necessitates no modification of the system under which organized baseball is operating, and advises all clubs and players that business will proceed as usual and that all legal contracts must be lived up to by the parties to them.

The statement, in full, follows:

"The decision made by Justice Stafford that organized baseball violated the prohibitions of the Sherman act was not rendered in a suit by the United States to dissolve the combination. The decision, therefore, necessitates no modification of the system under which organized baseball is operating. That system has been under the public eye for many years. Great investments depend upon its continuance. The Government of the United States has not challenged it. On the contrary, when the attention of the Department of Justice was specifically called to the system and its operation, the department decided that no reason was perceived for governmental interference.

"'All clubs and players are accordingly advised that business will proceed as usual and that all legal contracts must be lived up to by the parties to them. In rendering his decision, Justice Stafford intimated that the important questions of law involved in it should be passed upon by a higher court. Our attorneys have accordingly been instructed to take an immediate appeal."

YANKEES BLANK DODGERS.

Hold Brooklyn to One Hit and Win by 7 to 0 Score.

Special to The New York Times.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., April 14.—Heavy hitting in the late innings and the best pitching that either team has shown in the Spring series gave the Yankees an easy victory over the Dodgers here this afternoon. The National Leaguers went to the eighth inning before they got a hit, Krueger turning the trick then after two batsmen had been retired in order. The score was 7 to 0. A crowd of 2,000 fans turned out to see the contest.

Though the diamond had not been used in almost two years, the players fielded as they do on big league fields, the Dodgers making no misplays and the Yankees only one. Ward made a high throw to first base after fielding Olsen's drive in the fifth inning.

Thormahlen and Nelson were the pitchers who came so close to a no-hit game before the opening of the regular season. The Jersey southpaw occupied the mound for five innings, and did not allow a hit. Nelson, the rookie from Memphis, who made such a pronounced hit with Huggins at Jacksonville, followed Thormahlen, and in his four innings the one hit cropped out. He pitched to only thirteen batsmen, as the Dodgers went out in order in the last four innings, Krueger alone excepted.

Pfeiffer and Grimes, the combination which proved so effective in the third game of the series, did the boxwork for the Robins today, the former being quite effective and the latter a mark. Pfeiffer was not scored on for five innings and he had the first two batsmen out in the sixth when three successive hits netted two runs. Grimes was pounded hard in each of three innings that he pitched.

Huggins made an outfield shift and Duffy Lewis played centre, where he is to play in the championship season. Ping Bodie was not feeling well so George Halas was sent to left field. The collegian did some good work in the field and he got a clean single in the seventh inning, but the old charley horse again got in its work as he raced to first base and he had to give way to Lamar, who finished the game in left.

The Yankees went to the front in the sixth inning. With two out Pipp singled to right, Pratt doubled to left and both scored on Lewis's single.

In the seventh Halas opened with a single and Lamar ran for him. Ward's single to centre sent Lamar to third and Ruel sent him home with a hit to left. In the eighth inning Pipp doubled along the left field line, Pratt sacrificed him to third and he walked home when Lewis doubled to left.

The American Leaguers pounded Grimes in the ninth for four more hits and three more runs. Nelson singled to right and reached third on Peck's single to left. Pipp's double to left scored Nelson and sent Peck to third, both Peck and Pipp coming home on Pratt's safe slam to left field.

The teams play in Orangeburg, S. C., tomorrow.

FORDHAM NINE WINS AGAIN.

Defeats Seton Hall by 8 to 2 with Aid of Home Runs.

The Fordham baseball team easily triumphed over the Seton Hall nine in a loosely played game at Fordham Field yesterday afternoon, by the score of 8 to 2. The contest marked the second defeat of the New Jersey boys this season at the hands of the Maroon aggregation.

Martin, Fordham's veteran twirler, made his season's début and pitched fine ball. He registered eight strikeouts and was very effective in the pinches. Keough, the Maroon left fielder, put his team in the lead in the fifth inning with a home run. He clinched the game in the eighth round by slamming out another circuit clout. Walters starred for the visitors and got three hits out of four times at bat.

KEEP COLUMBIA NINE BUSY.

Blue and White Team Plays Three Games This Week.

The Columbia 'Varsity nine this week faces one of the most difficult periods of the season when it tackles Swarthmore, Johns Hopkins, and Princeton tomorrow, Thursday, and Saturday, respectively.

The game with Princeton on Saturday will be the first in which the Tigers have played on Columbia's diamond in many years, and the home team is expecting one of the biggest crowds of the year. Swarthmore, which comes to South Field tomorrow, will probably be a hard nut for Columbia to crack, because Ogden, the Little Quakers' star pitcher, is going at his best. It is likely that Fred Dawson will send Tom Farrell against Swarthmore, while he will use Koenig in the Johns Hopkins game and "Cy" Meany in the Princeton contest.

EXTEND TIME FOR ENTRIES.

Amateur Wrestling Tourney Expects to Have About Sixty Contestants.

Entries for the Metropolitan A. A. U. wrestling championship tournament, to be promoted at Madison Square Garden Concert Hall Saturday and Monday nights, will be received up to Thursday morning. The lists were to have closed yesterday, but because of an unexpectedly low number of entries it was decided to extend the closing time. Thirty-six entries had been received up to yesterday, and it is expected to increase this number by at least twenty-five through the additional time.

B. Bradshaw, Boys' Club; Jake Stumpf, Grace Club; George Minert, National Turn Verein, and J. Lahey, East Side Y. M. C. A., were selected as referees for the tournament. Time-keepers, weighers, and clerks of the stage were also appointed.

RECRUIT PITCHERS WIN FOR GIANTS

Jones and Winters Shut Out Washington, 4 to 0, in First Game of Exhibition Series.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 14.—The New York Giants shut out the Washington American League Club here today in the opening game of a Spring exhibition series by a score of 4 to 0. Heine Zimmerman was the hero of the day. The celebrated son of the Bronx delivered two pinch blows, each of which drove home a brace of runs. So that Heine practically won the game single handed.

The game was much harder fought than the score might indicate. Griffith employed two of his veteran pitchers while McGraw used colt pitchers. The youngsters suffered nothing in comparison to the seasoned box talent, for neither side could complain on the score of support.

John Paul Jones and Jess Winters both proved themselves dependable in the pinches, for both worked out of many tight holes for which wildness was often at fault.

The first two men hit safely off Jones in the second inning, yet no run developed. Judge singled and Foster doubled, with only one gone in the third. A pass and Davis's double put runners on third and second again in the fourth, with only one out; but John Paul Jones, by the pace of his good right arm and the encouragement of a hearty supporting cast, pulled safely through on both occasions.

Winters was greeted by Rice's double in the sixth, and then walked Shanks. He, too, squeezed through to safety, helping himself by striking out Davis. He allowed only one hit after this, but dispensed three passes and made a wild pitch.

Harry Harper got by safely for three innings, timely double plays aiding greatly in both the second and third rounds. The Giants, however, finally broke through the southpaw's defensive in the fourth. Young beat a slow roller to Janvrin and got to second on a wild pitch after Chase had filed to Rice. Kauff walked and took second while Judge was retiring Doyle single handed here. Heine Zimmerman after a wild bingle hit the ball on the handle of his bat and lifted a puzzling Texas Leaguer which Davis could not quite reach. As two were out, both runners scored easily.

ALEX BACK FROM FRANCE.

Cubs' $50,000 Pitcher Was Under Fire for Seven Weeks.

Sergeant Grover Cleveland Alexander, with his $50,000 pitching arm, is back from France. The costly pitcher of the Chicago Cubs returned yesterday on the Rochambeau. Contrary to the fond hopes of Manager Fred Mitchell of the Cubs, Alexander is not going to rush into a baseball uniform and get ready to pitch the opening game. He is so glad to get out of the army that the first thing he is going to do is to take a vacation.

Alexander will spend two weeks with his mother, who lives in St. Paul, Neb., and after that he will take a two weeks' rest. Then he will join the Cubs, and expects that he will have the greatest season of his career. Alex says his arm is in great shape, and although he has got done so very much pitching he knows that a successful Summer is ahead for him. The boxman is larger and healthier than ever before.

Alexander was with the 89th Division and for seven weeks was under fire. He was with the artillery.

MARYLAND IS AFTER BOUT.

Cumberland Makes Offer for the Willard-Dempsey Battle.

Tex Rickard, promoter of the proposed heavyweight championship glove contest between Jess Willard, title holder, and Jack Dempsey, scheduled for July 4, will probably announce the site for the battle Monday. The promoter had a conference yesterday with John W. Snyder of Cumberland, Md., in which the latter sought to induce Rickard to hold the bout in Cumberland.

Rickard declined to give a definite decision in the matter, but stated he would make his choice between Cumberland and a site he refused to divulge, by next Monday. This declaration was accepted as significant that Rickard has practically selected his site and will announce his plans within a week.

With characteristic obstinacy, Promoter Rickard refused to disclose the location of the site which he has under consideration besides Cumberland.

In behalf of the latter city, Mr. Snyder submitted that it was advantageously located for such an important sporting event, and that there was no limit on the number of rounds for boxing bouts.

RETAINS TENNIS TITLE.

Mrs. Chambers Defeats Miss Holman in Queen's Club Tourney.

LONDON, April 14.—Mrs. Chambers, the British women's singles champion, retained that honor today by defeating Miss Holman in the championship round of the woman's singles in the covered court matches at the Queen's Club. The score was 6—3, 6—3.

RICE DEFEATED WITH CUE.

R. Steinbugler Wins Handicap Billiard Match in Cup Tourney.

Julian Rice proved unequal to the task of conceding a handicap of 60 points to Robert Steinbugler yesterday in the Poggenburg Cup amateur handicap 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn. Rice, a Class B player, was striving for 175 points, while Steinbugler, a Class C contestant, had only to make 115 points to win. Steinbugler ran out his 115 points in thirty-four innings, while Rice was gathering 122. The victor had a high run of 21 and averaged 3 13-34. Rice's high run was 17 and he averaged 3 23-33.

In the evening two contests were decided. The victors were Charles Steinbugler, brother of the afternoon winner, and the veteran, Louis A. Servatius. Steinbugler, by a closing cluster of 11 points, snatched victory from Sydney Brussel by a score of 115 to 109 in 28 innings. Brussel led throughout until the last inning, when Steinbugler, with the score 109 to 104 against him, registered his 11 points. Both players are rated at Class C standard.

TRANBY WINS CLOSE RACE.

Just Lasts Long Enough to Beat Prunes at Bowie.

BOWIE, Md., April 14.—Though there was no stake event on the program of the Southern Maryland Association today, the racing was keener than on Saturday, when the card bristled with specialties. The best contest developed in the third race, for three-year-olds, at six and a half furlongs, in which S. Louis's Tranby lasted just long enough to beat Prunes by a neck. With a little different racing luck the positions might have been reversed, for, though Rice, on Tranby, let Romeo and Tiger Rose race in front, he was never far from the pace, and a little more than a furlong from home Tranby forged into the lead. Meantime Prunes, which had been trailing, found his speed as he entered the stretch, and made up ground so rapidly that it looked as if he would have won in a few more strides.

The summaries:

FIRST RACE—For two-year-old maidens; claiming; four furlongs. Bohema-Breena, 109 pounds, (Obert,) $7.90, $5.30, and $3.90, won; Billy Boots, 106, (Meagher,) $25.10 and $24.70, second; Rolsterer, 110, (Metcalf,) $6.30, third. Time—0:50. Little Alexander, Lady Jane, Major Fisk, Le Blouet, Silex II., Harriet, Col. Murphy, and Escarpelette also ran.

SECOND RACE—For maiden three-year-olds and upward, claiming; six furlongs. Toadstool, 110 pounds, (Troxler,) $3.50, $3.10, and $2.90, won; Miss Sterling, 113, (Butwell,) $5.60 and $4.60, second; Tom Foel, 110, (Obert,) $6.80, third. Time—1:15. Vigilante, Hasty Lady, Jack Healey, Star Craft, Marie Connell, Challenge, Boston, Sir Haste, Hand Grenade II., and Retreat also ran.

THIRD RACE—For three-year-olds and upward, claiming; six and a half furlongs. Tranby, 109 pounds, (Rice,) $26, $9.60, and $4.50, won; Prunes, 109, (Richcreek,) $6.40 and $3.70, second; Romeo, 100, (Stapleton,) $2.80, third. Time—1:21 3-5. Tiger Rose, Wood Violet, and Graphic also ran.

FOURTH RACE—For three-year-olds and upward, claiming; one mile and a sixteenth. Pluvenal, 90 pounds, (Stapleton,) $8.90, $4.40, and $3.20, won; Don Dodge, 112, (Sterling,) $3.80 nad $3.10, second; Almar B., 109, (Wakoff,) $5.90, third. Time—1:51. Amalgamator, Candidate II., and Peerless One also ran.

FIFTH RACE—For three-year-olds and upward, claiming; one mile and seventy yards. American, 101 pounds, (Stapleton,) $8.70, $4.90, and $3.50, won; Bill Hanley, 108, (Rice,) $4.70 and $3.40, second; Dunreary, 100, (Metcalf,) $3.60, third. Time—1:48 4-5. Fairy Prince, Old Bill Bender, Sister Marjorie, James A. Sheridan, and Mataska also ran.

SIXTH RACE—For three-year-olds and upward, claiming; one mile and seventy yards. Simon Pure, 106 Pounds, (C. Taylor,) $7.30, $2.90, and $2.50, won; Cadillac, 112, (Butwell,) $2.80 and $2.30, second; Stir Up, 112, (Sterling,) $4.10, third. Time—1:48 2-5. Otisco, Camacho, Leinster, and Inquieta also ran.

SEVENTH RACE—For three-year-olds and upward, claiming; one mile and seventy yards. Indian Chant, 110 pounds, (Richcreek,) $4.70, $3.10, and $2.40, won; Toddler, 92, (Stapleton,) $5.20 and $3.50, second; Dan, 112, (Carey,) $2.80, third. Time—1:48 4-5. ## PLATT IS PRESSED TO WIN.

Defeats J. A. Vietor in Squash Tourney at Yale Club.

A rally in the third game of the match gave Livingston Platt, winner of the recent Class A scratch tournament, a victory over J. A. Vietor yesterday in the preliminary round of the Yale Club's annual Class A handicap squash tennis tournament. The scores were 14—17, 15—13 and 15—13.

The match was keenly contested. Platt, playing at scratch, conceded a handicap of one ace to his rival, and encountered unexpected opposition. Vietor played in surprising form throughout. He took the first match after a nip and tuck struggle during which there were frequent rallies. The lead alternated frequently until the score reached 14 all. After that Vietor scored three aces before Platt could register one.

The second game found Vietor tiring. Platt's hard drives, however, and an occasional change of pace, gave the Class A tournament winner the game by 15—13. In the third game, Vietor was strong for a time and quickly advanced to what looked like a commanding lead. Before Platt had negotiated a single ace, Vietor had reeled off 10 and seemed well on the road to victory. Platt's play at this stage of the game underwent a favorable reversal and in a brilliant rally he changed the tide of battle in time to win by 15—13.

C. J. Maguire, scratch, scored a straight-games victory over Stuyvesant Wainwright, Jr., in the only other match contested. The scores were 15—11, 15—11.

Two other matches went by default, bringing the players into the first round. Donald McKay defaulted to S. H. Johnson, who was rated at plus seven aces and William Adams, scratch, advanced through the preliminary round with a default from D. S. Baker, plus two aces.

The summaries:

Yale Club annual Class A handicap squash tennis tournament.—Preliminary round—S. H. Johnson (plus 7 aces) won from Donald McKay, (scratch,) by default; Livingston Platt (scratch) defeated J. A. Vietor, (plus 1 ace,) 14—17, 15—13, 15—13; Wm. Adams, (scratch,) won from D. S. Baker, (plus 2 aces,) by default; C. J. Maguire (scratch) defeated S. Wainwright, Jr., (plus 2 aces,) 15—11, 15—11.

Goods That Will Drape Wanted.

As plans for the Fall season mature, the dress goods houses are finding that the style of material giving the best draping effect is the type mostly wanted. Soft-finished goods on the velour order attract the buyer's attention over the hard-finished, stiffer materials. Fabrics almost approaching the velvet order, it is said, will find the most popular call. This will be particularly true of cloakings, and applies also to the cloth to be used in suits.

To Act Against Cancellations.

The broad silks department of the Silk Association of America will shortly embark, it was said yesterday, on a campaign against cancellations. Just now the manufacturers are not so much troubled with this trade evil as they have been in the past, but the time is thought opportune to proceed against those buyers who change their minds after placing an order. The silk men believe that, if a few examples are made of these unscrupulous houses, there will be less trouble experienced in trying to "make an order stick."

Gray Goods Still Higher.

The beginning of the week brought still higher prices on several constructions of cloths in the local gray goods market yesterday. Printcloths especially were active and strong. May, June and July deliveries of 39-inch 80 squares were sold by the mills at 16¾ cents, and similar shipments of 72-76s and 68-72s in that width brought 14 and 12½ cents, respectively. In the 38½-inch range of goods, business was done on 64-80s at 10⅝ cents, 60-52s at 9¼ cents, and 60-48s at 9 cents. Sheetings were also firmer, and are now getting hard to find for nearby delivery. Twelve cents was paid yesterday for 56-60 four-yard goods, while five-yards sold at 9¼ cents and 5.50s at 8¾ cents. Specialties for the clothing trade and fine-yarn cloths also were active and strong throughout the day.

Men's Neckwear in Good Demand.

The men's neckwear houses are enjoying an active pre-Easter business. The holiday buying has brought such an active demand that most houses have all they can do to keep up with deliveries. A wide distribution marks the business that is being taken. This covers cut silks in all varieties and knitted goods. It would be hard to pick out the dominant designs, though diagonals and figured effects seem to be taking the bulk of the trade. Wash ties are more active than they have been in some time.

Smoker for Cotton Men.

A smoker will be held at the Hotel Biltmore on April 23, at 9 o'clock to mark the opening of the three days' convention of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers. The smoker will be preceded by a short business meeting. "The New Era of Good Feeling Between the Sections" will be the subject of an address by William B. Thompson of New Orleans. There will be a program of music and entertainment, but the chief place will be given over to the creation of a friendlier relationship between the various sections and between the members in the same section.

Business in Men's Shirts.

The business being done in men's shirts leaves very little to be desired at the present time. Special success has been registered by the new matched collars and shirts, in colored designs. These novelties are finding an exceedingly active call right through the price range, and are especially good at present with the popular priced haberdashers. Satin stripes in the more staple merchandise are among the leaders. Silk shirts are selling better than ever and are even doing well with the retailers who handled very little of these high priced garments a short time back.

Fall Shoes Selling Freely.

No abatement in the demand for Fall shoes is reported in the local trade, and indications point to one of the biggest seasons ever experienced. Particularly good is the advance business being done in men's shoes. It is reported that preparation for the custom of men discharged from the national service are playing a good part in the activities of the retailers. Men's shoes in the high-price ranges are among the most active sellers of all, and from present indications the increases in pairs cut in 1919 by manufacturers of these goods over those made last year will range up to 75 per cent. The new narrow-toed last for men is making a hit with the retail trade.

Burlaps Have an Active Day.

Yesterday was one of the most active days the local market for burlaps has seen in quite a while. The result was that, while 8-ounce, 40-inch goods were sold in the morning at 6¼ cents, the asking price late in the afternoon had crept up to 7 cents. While no business had been done at that figure, so far as could be ascertained, holders are looking for sales at that price today. The closing asking price on 10½-ounce goods of the same width was also half a cent higher than that at which trading took place in the morning, the advance being from 8¼ cents to 8 cents. In addition to the heightening influence of the improved demand, the local market was further stimulated by bullish reports from Calcutta.

May Raise Tax on Our Goods.

Higher tariffs on American goods imported into foreign countries are predicted by an American business man now in Europe studying the trade situation at first hand. In a letter to an associate in this country he says, in part: "Consensus of opinion among buyers of American products is that tariffs will be imposed greatly in excess of those existing before the war, but that embargoes will speedily be eliminated. This conclusion would not hinder American business generally, as our type of quantity production will allow us to enter European markets competitively for at least ten years, as the standard of living here has been materially increased and wages correspondingly, although still lower than American standards. The lack of efficiency gives us the advantage. The need for all manufactured products is very great all over Europe."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Speculation In Stocks Gains New Force from Victory Loan Terms—Money Firm.

The excellent impression made by the terms of the Victory Liberty Loan had a pronounced effect on speculation in stocks, the tone of the market changing abruptly from what it had been at the end of the preceding week. There was heavy buying of some of the motor, shipping, petroleum, and so-called food stocks—the same ones that had been most attractive to traders previously—with the result that net gains running from 2 to more than 4 points were recorded among them at the close. The comment heard in brokerage circles indicated that the purchasers outside of the direct Wall Street environment had again taken part in dealings, and this view was supported by the size of the turnover, which was in excess of 1,000,000 shares. The steel stocks were rather inactive, compared with several of the other industrials, but they gained ground, and the railroad issues displayed a fairly firm trend. The whole market gave its strongest appearance near the end of the day.

The chief feature about the loan terms, as viewed from the Street, was the reduction of $1,500,000,000 in the amount which had been predicted, and reiterated time and again, as the expected size of the offering. Secretary Glass's announcement that $4,500,000,000 would be absolutely all that the Government needed not only came as an agreeable surprise, but tended to replace doubt with considerable optimism in banking quarters in respect to a wide distribution of the notes. An examination of the Secretary of the Treasury's statement seems to show either that Government expenditures are falling off rapidly or that income and excess profits receipts are calculated to run unusually heavy throughout the balance of the year. Up to the end of March the Government's outlay in liquidating the war costs and in maintaining the troops still abroad was continuing at a rate of close to $19,000,000,000 for the fiscal year, compared with the $18,000,000,000 estimate made some months ago. In March the outflow of Government funds showed a drop of more than $500,000 from the January total, and it may well be that the expense will shrink substantially from now on, a development which certainly would be welcomed by taxpayers and security owners throughout the country. Whatever the situation, the public has Mr. Glass's own word that this will be the final offering to be distributed in intensive fashion, and the stock market probably acquired some good cheer from this news. The 3½ per cent. tax-exempt bonds quite naturally fell back yesterday because of the favorable interest rate offered by the new notes, into which one may convert the 4¼ per cent. notes, but most of the other issues moved forward slightly. It is hard to see how investors could think that the new notes, payable in 1923, or possibly in 1922, would conflict with the existing bonds, and the relatively short life of the Victory paper should act as a strong factor in keeping them near par.

In general, the day's stock market displayed more the effect of highly concentrated speculative dealings than any notable investment purchases. The metal stocks continued under the influence of industrial sluggishness and uncertainty. The Street studied with considerable care the dispatches received from Paris which indicated that the amount of Germany's monetary penalty had been decided and forecast a refresh the completion of the peace treaty within a few weeks. Call money was firm at 6 per cent. all day long.

SEEK WAYS TO CUT CARRIERS' EXPENSES

Economies Necessary, Operators Believe, to Avoid a Further Increase in Rates.

SUPPLIES AT HIGH LEVELS

Railroad Administration Said to be Anxious to Avoid Increasing the Burden of Shippers.

While comment on the probability of a further increase in freight rates by the Railroad Administration to meet the deficit which is indicated for the end of this year's operation of the Class 1 railroads of the country, has been widespread, there is apparently a feeling among railroad bankers and operators that the Director-General of Railroads will try in every way to avoid any further advance. At the same time it is generally admitted that a further increase offers the only apparent solution of the problem and there are some railroad men who believe that an increase of from 10 to 15 per cent. will be necessary.

It is asserted that if the Railroad Administration's operation of the carriers throughout the current year nets $660,000,000—it is believed that the figures will be considerably lower—and the President decides to turn the roads back to private operation, the earnings will be sufficiently only to provide interest charges. It is not possible to estimate at this early date, according to students of the railroad situation, even the approximate amount of earnings for the carriers for this year, as traffic is falling off fast, and expenses are not decreasing in proportion.

The coal bill of the Railroad Administration last year was, in round figures, $473,000,000, at an average cost of $2.65 a ton. In the days of private control the roads obtained their coal at prices ranging from 98 cents to $1.10 and $1.25 a ton. It was asserted yesterday that if the cost of coal could be reduced $1.50 a ton, and it is understood that this is one of the things the Director General is striving for, the saving would be more than $250,000,000.

Another item which was brought forward was a possible saving on the price of steel products purchased. This, it was estimated, might be in the neighborhood of 20 per cent. The administration's bill for steel products in 1918 was approximately $440,000,000, and such a saving would amount to $80,000,000.

In 1918 the administration paid, in round figures, approximately $400,000,000 for ties, lumber, and other materials, and it was asserted that there might be a big saving effected in this item.

While these savings are admitted to work out nicely on paper, railroad men are not particularly sanguine of the success following an attempt to lower prices. They are emphatic, however, in statements that unless there are big decreases in costs and a commensurate increase in operating efficiency and labor, an increase in rates which would bring in additional revenue to an amount between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 will be necessary.

In some quarters it is not believed that further general increases will be made, as the general increase of last year, resulted in inequalities, some shippers now facing actual increases of from 30 to 35 per cent., while the Eastern roads advances caused others to pay from 40 to 50 and 65 per cent. more. This was due to the fact that some rates are based on other rates, and the whole rate structure interlocks so that a rate based on another was increased out of proportion because differentials had to be figured into the general and Eastern roads advances.

While the opinion prevails among railroad men and railroad bankers that a further increase is inevitable unless costs are reduced a great deal, such an increase is the last thing desired by them, as they do not feel that the shippers generally can carry much more than they are now burdened with.

"Cut anything in costs that is possible," said one railroad man yesterday, "before putting through another rate increase. The shippers can't stand it, in my opinion."

BARRETT COMPANY REPORT.

Net Profits of the Year's Operations Were $3,949,979.

The report of the Barrett Company for last year shows net sales of $41,339,664, an increase of approximately $7,000,000 over the figures of 1917. After charges and Federal income taxes, the net profits available for dividends were $3,949,979, equivalent after preferred dividends to $20.82 a share on the common. In the preceding year the amount applicable to the common stock was $3,728,302, or the equivalent of $20.21 a share. The reserve for Federal taxes was $2,000,000, an increase of $1,580,000 over 1917. The balance sheet shows working capital to be $14,638,489. The reserve for depreciation was $4,307,471, an increase of nearly $1,500,000.

In his remarks to the stockholders William Hamlin Childs, President of the company, says:

"The increase in the costs of materials and labor referred to in our circular letter of April 1, 1918, continued during 1918, and in common with other industries the company suffered a diminution of sales and earnings during the last two months of the year. Notwithstanding these handicaps, however, the net earnings of the company before reserves were set up to cover adjustments of inventories and of income and excess profits taxes, were the largest in the history of the company. The present financial condition of the Barrett Company and of all its subsidiary companies and departments is an eminently satisfactory one, and the business outlook for the future is as promising as can be expected, in view of the general unsettled state of the country."

COTTON PRICES ADVANCE.

Peace News and Quickened Demand Cause Orderly Increase.

Better news from Paris anent the peace negotiations and a quickened demand from local speculative houses sent cotton prices up in yesterday's market. The advance was orderely and the market at no time showed unusual excitement. The volume of business was not large at any time, and around midday fell to rather small proportions. The advance was really in two stages, one in the morning, when gains of 20 to 35 points were scored, and one in the afternoon, when additional gains were made which took the net movement of the day up some 50 to 60 points above last week's closing.

The weather map showed favorable conditions over the week-end, but predictions were for colder last night and today and the ring traders who play the map construed this as bullish. Incidentally, the "map players" are getting together somewhat earlier than usual, which augurs well for the dull days ahead. Trade advices were generally good, with reports of a better demand for cotton cloth and of firmness at Southern spot markets. Offerings of spots, it is said, are being limited somewhat to the low grades. Possibly this is due to the new Government trading regulations as regards the kind of cotton permitted to be delivered against future contracts.

Foreign cables were generally good. Liverpool was firm and reports had it that a good demand from the Continent obtained. Progress being made at Paris, where the peace treaty now seems to be in sight, was gratifying and rumors of the lifting of embargoes helped both here and at Liverpool.

The local spot market was firm, advancing 25 points in quotations. This advance, which took staple up to 28.70, had a good influence on all of the active months, and seemed to be as beneficial to the far months as to the old crop months. At the close new style May was up 20 points, while other new style options from July to March were up 53 to 60 points.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

Johnston, Vice President of the Chemical National Bank was elected Treasurer.

Daniel G. Wing, President of the First National Bank of Boston was elected First Vice Chairman of the Executive Committee, and Fred I. Kent, Vice President of the Bankers Trust Company, Second Vice Chairman. The Executive Committee was completed by the addition of the election of the following: William N. Nones, President of the Norma Company of America; Archibald Kains, President of the American Foreign Banking Corporation, and D. F. Kelly of Mendell Brothers of Chicago. William A. Law, President of the First National Bank of Philadelphia, and John H. Fulton, Vice President of the National City Bank, were added to the Committee on Policy and Operation.

HOLLAND SELLS GOLD HERE.

Metal Taken Before U. S. Entered War Returned to Sub-Treasury.

The Guaranty Trust Company yesterday delivered to the Sub-Treasury $2,000,000 in American gold coin which, it was learned, has been held in the vaults of the trust company for a considerable time. The metal, it was said, belonged to the Nederlandsche Bank of Amsterdam, and had been held since before the entrance of the United States into the war. It was "ear-marked" for the Dutch bank and held here pending arrangements for its delivery abroad, arrangements which were never completed.

At the present time the foreign exchange market does not warrant a movement of gold from the United States to Holland, so the Nederlandsche Bank has instructed the Guaranty Trust Company to sell the gold back to the Government and invest the proceeds in prime American acceptances. This is being done.

INTERBORO CO. FILES BANKRUPT SCHEDULE

Largest Liability is $1,500,000 Half-Yearly Interest on $67,825,600 4½% Bonds.

SCHEDULES NOT COMPLETE

Priority Claims Are Taxes Due to U. S. and New York State—Bondholders Listed.

Schedules in bankruptcy of the Interborough Consolidated Corporation, the holding company of the Interborough Rapid Transit and the New York Railways Companies, were filed in the Federal Court yesterday by the receiver, James R. Sheffield. They are incomplete for the reason that the bankrupt is the owner of stock in other corporations the value of which is problematical. For the purposes of the schedules the stock is placed at par value.

Its largest liability is the half-yearly interest due April 1 on approximately $67,825,600 of 4½ per cent. bonds on which the company defaulted. The interest due, about $1,500,000, is accumulative. The bonds are secured by $33,912,800 of the capital stock of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company.

The schedules show that the claims having priority are taxes due the United States, $44,751.71; taxes due New York State, $40,187.25; unknown holders of Interborough-Metropolitan 4½ per cent. collateral trust bonds, $432,112.50, and preferred stock of the Interborough-Metropolitan, $57,330. The total liabilities, according to the schedules, amount to $69,685,264. A list of about 2,500 bondholders, accompanying the schedules, show that the largest of them are Cornelius Vanderbilt, $870,000; Mrs. Grace G. Vanderbilt, $60,000; August Belmont, $1,928,000; Richard T. Wilson, $40,000; Harvard College, $200,000; Martin B. Metcalf, $700,000; M. F. Plant, $2,000,000; Spencer Trask & Co., $284,000, and Louisa Elkins Sinkler, $100,000.

Among the assets are promissory notes of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, $1,300,000; unliquidated claims, $124,291.95, consisting of interest due on Inter-Met. collateral trust bonds; deposits in banks, $544,967.55; loan to the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, $500,000, one year 6 per cent. notes of the Interborough Company, $800,000, and demand notes of the Rapid Transit Subway Company, a subsidiary of the Interborough Company, $1,000,000.

The bankrupt company holds 96.89 per cent. of the $25,000,000 capital stock of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, $15,061,600.20 of the $17,495,000 capital stock of the New York Railways Company, and $1,035,741 of the total capital stock of $2,350,000 of the New York Transportation Company, commonly known as the Fifth Avenue Bus Company.

There is also listed among the assets $400,000 of Liberty Loan bonds, but only the first payment has been made on these, and the bonds are held by the financial institutions which accepted the subscriptions. How much had been paid on the bonds was not stated.

Receiver Sheffield has reduced the expenses of running the bankrupt company from $41,961 a year to $3,721. He has cut off the $250 a month paid to Theodore P. Shonts as President, and has reduced the legal expenses about $23,000 a year. Other cuts were made in the stenographic and clerical force and in smaller ways. He has retained the services at their old salaries of $31.25 a month of Horace M. Fisher, Secretary; John H. Campbell, Treasurer, and E. F. J. Gaynor, auditor. These receive larger pay for serving the Interborough Company and the New York Railways Company in similar capacities.

Reduction of Principal

HOW large an amount of the principal of a mortgage should be amortized or paid off each year?

Some institutions require payments of 1% or 2%. The Straus Plan makes much more strict provisions for the protection of investors. We require that about 5% of the principal of each first mortgage bond issue be paid off annually out of the earnings of the mortgaged property.

Every investor should be familiar with the Straus Plan. Call or write for our booklet, "Safety & 6%," explaining our plan and the sound first mortgage 6% serial bonds we offer. Ask for

Cities Service Company is one of the largest producers of oil in the United States.

Its Preferred Stock yields about 7½% at present prices. Dividends of over four million dollars were paid on the Preferred in 1918, and the Company's earnings were over five times the Preferred dividend requirements.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 9,244 packages. Liberal supplies, very moderate trading and prices off about 1½c. The range of values is very narrow, secondary qualities selling out of all proportion to their real value. Renovated steady. Ladles and packing stock unchanged, but tone easy. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 63½@64c; extras, 92 score, 63c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 61½@62½c; seconds, 88 to 87 score, 59@61c; lower grades, 56@58c; unsalted, higher than extras, 64½@65c; extras, 63½@64c; firsts, 62@63c; seconds, 60@61½c; State dairy tubs, finest, 62@62½c; good to prime, 57@61c; common to fair, 47@56c; renovated, extras, 59@61c; firsts, 48½@49½c; lower grades, 45@47c; imitation creamery, firsts, 48@49c; ladles, current make, firsts, 46@47c; seconds, 44½@45c; lower grades, 43@44c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 43½@44c; No. 2, 43c; lower grades, 39@42c.

EGGS.—84,177 cases, not including 1,600 cases in transit for export. Arrivals continue liberal. Western advices somewhat conflicting, most of the high-class stock arriving is under a cost which precludes sale at any lower prices, and the storage movement continues free. The current trading is moderate, and some receivers regard outside quotations as extreme, although they are still supported by business in fair-sizer lots. Dirties are rather plentiful, and outside quotations can be obtained only for strictly choice, closely graded goods. Nearby white eggs are clearing up very well and prices are steadily sustained. Fresh gathered, extras, a dozen, 45½@46c; storage packed, extra firsts, 44½@45c; firsts, 43@44½c; gathered, extra firsts, 44@44½c; firsts, Northerly sections, 41½@43½c; Southerly sections, 40½@43c; seconds and poorer, 38@40c; dirties, No. 1, 38½@39½c; No. 2 and poorer, 35@38c; checks, good to choice, dry, 37½@38½c; under grades, 35@37c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 52c; ordinary to prime, 46@51c; gathered whites ordinary to fine, 46@51c; Pacific Coast, good to fine, 48@49c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 44@50c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 46@47c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 42@46c; duck eggs, nearby Indian Runner, fancy, 65@68c; Baltimore, 66@67c; Virginia, 59@66c; Western and other Southern, good to prime, 58@63c; far Southern, common to fair, 50c; goose eggs, 85c@$1.

EXTENDS TAX RETURN DATE.

Commissioner Roper Fixes June 15 for Corporation Incomes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—D. C. Roper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, announced tonight that an additional forty-five-day extension for the filing of complete returns in the case of corporations had been granted, thus bringing the final day up to June 15. This decision will not apply to individuals, however, and all reports on such payments must be filed by May 1.

Where advantage is taken by corporations of the extension to June 15, a sum which brings the total payments to that date up to at least half of the total income tax, must be paid. Otherwise interest at one-half of 1 per cent. will be charged on the taxes not paid in.

The time for filing returns of informations, (Forms 1096 and 1099,) fiduciary returns, (Form 1041,) withholding returns, (Form 1042, accompanied by Form 1068 and Form 1013,) returns of partnership and personal corporations required to file returns on a calendar year basis, and all other returns required under the income tax and profits tax provisions of the law, which are not the basis for the assessment of the tax, is also extended.

FINANCIAL NOTICES.

NEW YORK RAILWAYS COMPANY.

NOTICE is hereby given that on the 10th day of April, 1919, the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York made an order in the equity suit pending in said Court, No. E 18-29 brought by the American Brake Shoe & Foundry Company, compltainant, against the New York Railways Company, defendant, which order among other things provides, that

(1) All claims and demands against the said New York Railways Company shall be presented to Job E. Hedges, as Receiver of said New York Railways Company, at his office, No. 165 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City and State of New York, on or before the 16th day of June, 1919.

(2) If any persons having claims and demands against the said New York Railways Company shall fail to present such claims and demands on or before the said 16th day of June, 1919, as provided in said order, each of them so failing shall be barred from sharing in any distribution of the moneys or assets of said New York Railways Company which now or hereafter shall be in the hands of said Receiver and from sharing in any distribution of any of the proceeds arising from the sale of any of the properties of said New York Railways Company.

Nothing in said order requires contingent claims and claims secured by mortgage or other recorded lien to be presented to the Receiver, as above stated.

All holders of claims or demands against New York Railways Company are hereby notified to present their claims in accordance with said order.

Forms for proof of claims or demands may be obtained at the office of the Receiver.

Dated, New York, N. Y., April 10, 1919.

JOB E. HEDGES,
As Receiver of New York Railways Company, 165 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City and State of New York.

Belfast

THIS city, with a population in 1911 of 386,947, is one of the first-class ports of the United Kingdom, with a large and safe harbor noted for its fine docking facilities, which cover an area of 132 acres. In its harbor are three large shipbuilding yards, in which were built the Oceanic, Cedric, Celtic, and the Baltic, for a time the largest ship in the world.

Belfast is an important manufacturing place; its linens and damasks are noted the world over. The prosperity of the trade and industry in the Belfast Consular District was well maintained during 1917, and the output of some industries was the greatest in their history. Cotton trade has developed to such an extent in Belfast that the movements of the market and course of prices have been followed with the keenest interest.

Its total commerce in 1916 was $49,986,000, of which only $1,996,000 were exports.

RUTLAND RAILROAD REPORT.

Company Shows Gross Income of $1,141,880 for the Year 1918.

The annual report of the Rutland Railroad Company for 1918 showed gross income of $1,141,880 of which $1,023,883 was the annual rental agreed upon in the contract between the company and the Railroad Administration. Net corporate income of the road for the year was $548,476.

For the convenience of stockholders the Federal Railroad Administration's operating report for the property for the same period was added to the corporate report. It showed an increase in railway operating revenues of $215,220 to $4,540,589 while railway operating expenses increased $1,111,456 to $4,387,181. Net revenue from railway operations decreased more than $896,000 to $153,408 and after the deduction of railway tax accruals this left a deficit of $728,004 against railway operating income the year before amounting to $795,833.

HIGHER FARE APPEAL FAILS.

Supreme Court Denies Columbus Street Railway Company's Claim.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Federal Court decrees dismissing injunction proceedings brought to restrain city officials of Columbus, Ohio, from preventing the Columbus Street Railway Company from increasing its fares, owing to increased operating expenses due principally to an award of the War Labor Board, were sustained today by the Supreme Court in disposing of appeals brought by the company and its stockholders.

Because an award of the War Labor Board increased employes' wages 50 per cent., or $560,000 annually, the company sought to be relieved from its obligations to furnish eight tickets for a quarter and universal transfers, and to increase the fare to 5 cents.

In denying the claim, the Federal District Court held that the company's earnings amounted to 4½ per cent. on the value of its property and that the franchises bound the company to perform its obligations.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Substantial net gains were recorded at the close of an active market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final quotations were around the highest for the session. The upward movement was the result of a vigorous demand which obtained during the greater part of the day. What reactions occurred represented profit taking and had no disturbing effect on the strong tone of the market. Speculative interest centred in the industrials.

DUTCH SHIPS COST $3,200,000 A MONTH

Terms On Which This Government Requisitioned Them Considered Favorable to Holland.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—When the American Government took over approximately 400,000 dead-weight tons of Dutch shipping, more than a year ago, it contracted to pay the Netherlands Government 35 shillings a ton monthly rental at a definite rate of exchange. The figure was disclosed today for the first time. It equals a little more than $8 a dead-weight ton, or more than $3,200,000 a month. The United States agreed also to pay the full value of each ship destroyed and an assessed amount for damaged ships.

All of these ships have now been ordered turned back to the owners as soon as repairs can be made to put them in as good condition as when they were taken over. None has been surrendered yet, but eight or nine probably will be turned back this month.

The contract by which the requisitioned ships were taken over was regarded here as very favorable to the Dutch owners, as the rate of compensation was based on the high freights prevailing during the war and the American Government assumed all war risks of damage or loss. Furthermore, the ships were kept constantly in operation, with no losses from idle time.

PHILADELPHIA WOOL SALE.

Better Grades Are Taken Up While Poorer Ones Are Withdrawn.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 14.—Some of the carpet wools offered at today's Government auction, the first of Series 14, brought higher prices than was evidenced at a similar sale held in this city three weeks ago. Today's sale, which was held at the Manufacturers' Club, was considered a fairly good one, and bidding was confined to a few buyers.

High prices, wanted by the Government for some stock, restricted buying at times, but it was said that the lack of purchasing which was noticeable at intervals throughout the sale was not because of poor stock. Some of the buyers, however, said that the desirable grades of wool offered were quickly taken and brought good prices, and that the stock that was withdrawn was of poor quality.

While there were 103 lots of wool withdrawn out of 219 that were offered those that were withdrawn consisted of small quantities. This was shown by the fact that of the total offerings of 3,600,000 pounds of greasy carpet wool and 1,300,000 pounds of scoured carpet wool 60% per cent. was sold, 1,962,600 pounds being withdrawn.

S. Sanford & Sons purchased the largest quantity of stock, taking 983,672 pounds. Other buyers were the Hartford-Bigelow Carpet Company, 665,000 pounds; Alexander Smith & Sons' Carpet Company, 301,014 pounds; Charles J. Webb & Co., 301,014 pounds, and William D. Oelbermann & Co., 109,485 pounds.

The present series will continue tomorrow with a sale of clothing wools. Offerings at that time will be about 900,000 pounds domestic fleeces, 1,000,000 pounds territories, and about 700,000 pounds of Texas and California wool. The auctions will also be held Wednesday and Thursday.

STRIKE GRIPS LIMERICK.

City Paralyzed by Unions in Protest Against Martial Law.

LIMERICK, April 14, (Associated Press.)—This city awoke today to find in full effect a general strike called by the trades unions as a protest against martial law in the Limerick military area. The gas and electric supplies were cut off at 2 o'clock in the morning, and no factories or stores opened, even the drug stores having their blinds drawn. Food supplies ceased coming into the city, the farmers refusing to take out military permits to enter Limerick.

There have been no disorders. Several processions were cheered loudly. The military area has been extended to include the district north of the River Shannon.

It was reported that the railway men had given notice that they would strike in forty-eight hours unless the order for martial law were rescinded. A railway strike would isolate the city completely, as public automobiles are not operating because of the strike. The only transport would be by jaunting car, the hiring price of which already has begun to advance.

8,000 LADS IN CITY ARE DRUG ADDICTS

80,000 in Draft Were Rejected by National Army, Rainey Tells Parole Board.

"DOPED" TO EVADE SERVICE

Prohibition a Disturbing Factor—State Commission Joins Local Health Department Campaign.

There are in New York City alone 8,000 men between 21 and 31 years old who are drug addicts, while elsewhere there were 80,000 in the first draft for the National Army, it was disclosed yesterday in a report made public by the New York City Parole Commission.

The report on this point said:

"Congressman Rainey, who is a most active worker against this evil, and who has labored with the United States Treasury Department on new legislation to amend the Harrison Narcotic Drug act of 1914, has brought out some astounding facts on this subject. He offers the opinion that since the only weapon of the Federal authorities is for preventive purposes and to restrict the sale of drugs through revenue enactments, the real fight must be made by State and municipal authorities. Speaking of young men of draft age, he says it was found that there were 80,000 drug addicts in the first draft, all of whom needed medical attention.

"They were all rejected by camp officers as incompetent and, worse still, young men deliberately acquired the drug habit to escape the draft. He has a list of twenty-five physicians who were commissioned as Captains and Majors who are drug addicts, and also the name of a physician so commissioned who started for France with a large amount of narcotics to be dealt out among soldiers. In New York City a list has been made up of 8,000 men between 21 and 31 who are drug addicts. The Congressman regards the newly enacted prohibition laws as a certain source of still greater drug addiction."

Accompanying the report of the Commission was a letter written by Alexander McKinny, its Chairman, in which it was asserted that an ex-convict now on parole had declared that he visited the Department of Health's Bureau of Drug Addiction Clinic at 145 Worth Street the other day and obtained a portion of drug which he "split" with "pals" who were waiting outside.

Chairman McKinny declared the custodial method, in his opinion, was the only way to treat addicts, and said he could not indorse the Health Department's system of establishing public clinics.

Whatever their virtue, yesterday again indicated that the clinic in Worth Street was popular with the drug victims. From the time it opened until the doors were barred 1,000 addicts of both sexes came to get their daily portion of narcotics. It was announced by Health Commissioner Copeland that to date 2,500 persons have been treated at the clinic, and the chances were that the daily visitation would continue to increase.

This morning the State Narcotic Commission will open an office in the Department of Health building, 139 Centre Street. Ex-Senator George H. Whitney, Deputy Commissioner of Drug Control, will be in charge and will undertake an immediate checking up of drug prescriptions. The Commissioner is empowered under the Boyland anti-drug law to conduct hearings in the cases of physicians suspected of irregular practice in drugs, and, upon a conviction, to revoke the doctor's license to issue narcotic prescriptions.

At the meeting which decided upon this step were Commissioners Copeland and Whitney, former Senator Walter R. Herrick, who has been nominated by Governor Smith to head the State Narcotic Commission and whose confirmation by the Senate is expected as tomorrow at the latest; Police Inspector Joseph Faurot, Lieutenant Henry Scherb of the Narcotic Squad and Justice Cornelius F. Collins of Specia Sessions, who is Chairman of the New York State and City Magistrates' Committee on the Drug Evil.

Justice Collins and William F. Fetherston, counsel to the Health Department, pointed out that the conference might as well not attempt to frame an amendment to the State Sanitary Code, since full power to regulate issuance of narcotic prescriptions was vested by the law in the State Commission.

DEBS GIVES PRISON PROMISE

Agrees to Refrain from Propaganda in Federal Prison.

WHEELING, W. Va., April 14.—Eugene V. Debs, Socialist leader, sentenced to ten years' imprisonment at the Moundsville Penitentiary, near Wheeling, for violation of the Espionage Act, began his term today as a clerk in the prison hospital.

Warden Terrell said that he had intended to assign Debs to the library, but decided that Debs would be the object of too much curiosity there and gave him the clerkship, the lightest work in the institution, because of his age.

Before he began work the warden told Debs that he would be well treated so long as he complied with the prison regulations and that the only special requirement in his case was that he refrain from preaching any of his doctrines, which Debs agreed to do.

SEVEN DEAD IN RACE RIOTS.

Two Policemen and Four Negroes Killed in Georgia.

MILLEN, Ga., April 14.—Seven fatalities were reported today in race riots begun yesterday at Buckhead Church, this county.

County Policeman W. C. Brown, T. H. Stephens, Night Marshal, and four negroes were killed and another negro was taken from the jail and lynched.

Seven negro lodge and church buildings have been burned, and it is feared that the trouble is not yet over.

HARBOR MEN VOTE STRIKE ON R.R. BOATS

CONFERENCE DELAYS ACTION

Agreed That Government Shall Have 48 Hours' Notice—About 8,000 Men Will Be Affected.

Harbor workers voted yesterday to declare a strike against the Railroad Administration because of the discharge of a number of tug crews as agreement breakers, but immediate action was prevented by a conference between the strike leaders and Regional Director A. H. Smith of the eastern division.

The conference produced no agreement, but will be resumed today at 11 o'clock. Director Smith insisted at the interview that the union men, who had settled their grievances with the railroad, comply with their agreement to handle all kinds of traffic which had been handled previous to the strike. The strike leaders, headed by President Thomas L. Delahunty of Marine Affiliation, demanded that the discharged men be reinstated before any further questions were settled.

It was agreed at the meeting that, if the strike is ordered, forty-eight hours' notice will be served on the Government by the unions, in accordance with the agreement which ended the strike in March, so that the strike is not likely to get under way before Wednesday in any event.

The vote of the harbor workers, who met yesterday, was 270 to 17 in favor of calling the strike. This solidarity of the union men in favor of the strike to compel reinstatement of the discharged men was somewhat surprising to officials of the Railroad Administration and the boat owners, who believed that the rank and file of the harbor workers were tired of the situation in the harbor, which is now entering upon its seventh week.

President Thomas L. Delahunty of the Marine Affiliation said yesterday that, if the strike was resumed, the men would quit work on municipal ferries and on boats of all classes. If the strike is declared again it will affect about 8,000 men, but they will be the more important classes of harbor workers. The tidewater boatmen and lightermen, who number about 10,000, have made terms with both the Railroad Administration and the private boat owners, but they work almost entirely on non-self-propelled boats. The men still on strike against the boat owners and threatening to renew the strike against the Railroad Administration, handle the towboats and tugs, which are needed to move the other class of boats.

Paul Bonynge, counsel for the Boat Owners' Association, said yesterday that, in spite of the strike the boat owners had about 120 tugs and steam lighters in operation, or about 25 per cent. of the craft owned by them, so that another flare-up of the strike would not nearly tie up the harbor. Mr. Bonynge asserted that the boat owners had made their last attempt to settle the strike as an organization of boat owners dealing with an organization of harbor workers, and that when the men wanted to come back to work they would have to make the best terms they could with individual firms.

CITY AID FOR CRIPPLED.

Aldermen Asked to License News Stands for Soldiers.

An ordinance prepared by the Red Cross Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men, providing that disabled soldiers and sailors receive the preference in the granting of news stand licenses, will be introduced before the Board of Aldermen today. The ordinance is not intended to cause any of the present holders of licenses to lose their stands, but regulates the issuance of licenses for other stands hereafter.

The following statement was sent out by the Red Cross Institute:

"The committee is actuated by the belief that it is the duty of those in power to give every possible opportunity for self-support to those men who have been injured in the country's service, and to those who, through circumstances beyond their control, have become so handicapped physically that they cannot compete on equal terms with their able-bodied fellows in the ordinary walks of life. The committee is aware of the fact that the disabled ex-service man expects something better than the opportunity to operate a news stand, but it also feels that there may be some who will want and welcome this type of employment. The city, in giving preference to the physically handicapped man, will accomplish a double result, the committee believes. First, it will render public service by the sale of newspapers at convenient points, and second, it will prevent physically handicapped persons from becoming dependents upon the community. The committee earnestly invites and urges all civic and charitable organizations interested in the welfare of the handicapped men to co-operate with it by giving assistance and support to the proposed ordinance."

His Big Day—

This isn't a try-on—it's a ceremony—an initiation.
When a boy first steps into long trousers,
he steps across one of the big thresholds of life.

Long trousers are insignia of manhood.

There are two disappointments a boy never forgets nor forgives: a first watch that doesn't keep time, and a first long-trousers suit that shames him because it is not genuine.

Because we know what it means to a boy, we see to it that his first long-trousers suit has in it literally everything that a well dressed man demands—fine all-wool fabrics, scrupulous tailoring and newest style touches.

In fact, his lithe, athletic figure permits a smartness of line and clever ideas in pockets, waist-seam effects and double breasted models that older men will envy.

Hart Schaffner & Marx Good "Prep" Suits

We have "Prep" Suits to outfit the boy of practically every build, so smartly, so perfectly, that people just naturally say, "How well he looks in his clothes."

Prices begin at $25—which makes their fine all-wool quality and stylish cut doubly interesting.

Other exceptional values at $28, $30, $35, $38 and $40.

Arnheim — TWO STORES BROADWAY & NINTH STREET, 30 EAST 42D STREET

Arnheim Axioms.

GOME right in, brothers, light the calumet and smoke up! I am glad to know that my fellow guildsmen of the National Association of Merchant Tailors are planning concertedly to advertise their technique to the Well-Dressed Men of America, just as I have advertised almost singly to the Well-Dressed Men of New York.

Too long has Custom Tailoring hidden its light under a bushel, while clothing made-by-the-bushel has put more art into its pictures, than into its product. Quantity-cut clothing has its place, but it must always stay in second place.

DAIRY SHOW

The Entire Milk Industry

April 21 to April 26.

HERE'S the country brought to the city; real live cows, real farmers, real farm family at home and at work producing the milk that New York City drinks.

Chosen housekeepers show how to make milk dishes—from soups to dessert;—a chance for you to try their cooking.

Children's Milk Week

will be featured at the Milk Show. Elimination contests each day, feeding of infants demonstrations, etc. Milk as a necessary food for growing children—under auspices of Department of Health of New York City.

See These Features:

1—Milking by electricity.
2—Cheese, butter and ice cream making.
3—Most valuable cheese in the world, representing 30,000 quarts of milk.
4—Dried Milk—how it is made.
5—Prize cows of different breeds. Champion milk producers.
6—Cost of milk production shown by actual food, labor, shelter and overhead exhibits and figures.
7—Food value of milk compared with other foods, shown by exhibits and actual cooking.
8—Speakers, open forum—food questions answered.
